18 Killed In Storm Along Atlantic Coast

Millions of Dollars In Property Damage Reported—New Jersey Beach Resorts Probably the Heaviest Sufferers—Snowfall General Throughout the East—Many Rescued In Storm.

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—Eighteen deaths and millions of dollars in property damage were caused by a furious snow, sleet and wind storm that had abated today after raging on land and sea in the Atlantic coast states for 48 hours.

From Maine to Delaware Bay mountainous seas tossed ships about like matchboxes, shattered dwellings and swept away piers and boardwalks. High tides which carried the raging waters hundreds of feet in shore added to the havoc in the coastal towns.

Snow fell to a depth of two feet in some places while the temperature dropped to ten degrees below zero. Transportation lines were hampered.

Relief in higher temperatures was in sight today for Pennsylvania and probably New York, said the weather bureau, with the storm center shifting to New England.

The turmoil at sea, attributed by a scientist of the American Museum of Natural History to the combination of a full moon and a northeast wind, started to subside with a change of the wind from northeast to east and later to west.

Eight Coast Guardsmen Killed.

The storm took its heaviest death toll off Provincetown, Mass., where eight coast guardsmen lost their lives when patrol boat 238 was tossed ashore. The entire boat's crew was lost as two destroyers vainly tried to rescue them.

Other deaths attributed to the storm included four in Pittsburgh and one each from exposure in Boston, Quincy, Malden and Leominster, Mass., one at South Amboy, N. J., and the second officer of a barge off Amrose lightship.

Beach Resorts Hard Hit.

New Jersey beach resorts were probably the heaviest storm sufferers. From Asbury Park to Cape May, high tides and great waves caused extensive damage to boats, boardwalks, shops, cottages and other structures. At Atlantic City, a 100-foot section of its famous boardwalk was lifted on the crest of an enormous wave and deposited on the top of a frame structure along the promenade.

Many small craft and some larger ones were thrown on reefs, bars and beaches along the entire coast line by the force of the waves which at times reached a height of 50 feet.

The fire masted schooner Nancy was driven high on the beach at Surfside, near Nantasket, Mass. The crew was rescued by volunteers in dories.

Shipping Suspended.

Shipping along the entire coast was practically suspended. Vessels were delayed 12 to 24 hours by the storm which extended far out to sea. The Adriatic of the White Star Line, returning from a Mediterranean cruise, after fighting a stiff gale, docked late yesterday as did also the Royal Mail liner Avon from Bermuda, which was eight hours behind schedule. The ship escaped damage but its 225 passengers were shaken by the rough seas. Mrs. Mary Schied of Brooklyn suffered a fractured leg when thrown by a lurch of the boat. Delay in the arrival of the United Fruit Company steamer Pastores, the Colombo from Naples and the Siboney from Havana was reported.

High Tide Causes Damage.

The tide in New York harbor was said to have been the highest in 20 years. Damage estimated at hundreds of thousands of dollars was done to piers and stores along the waterfront.

At Boston, most incoming ships halted at Quarantine rather than risk docking. Several coastal vessels, bound from New York to Providence, R. I., put in at New London rather than risk the fury of the seas.

The battle for life of the eight coast guardsmen off Provincetown was fought in a 75 mile an hour gale Flasher lights from their frail craft told their tale to persons ashore who were powerless to aid them.

The storm destroyed the last hope for the rescue of Lieutenants Willard J. Harris and William A. Gray, army aviators who were lost Thursday in a fog off the New Jersey coast while enroute from Mitchell Field, N. Y., to Langley Field, Va.

Snowfall General.

Snowfall was general throughout the east. Eight inches to a foot was reported throughout the New England states, upper New York state and in sections of Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

The Lebanon mountain road from Pittsfield, Mass., to Albany, N. Y., was closed by drifts.

The greatest havoc in the metropolitan district was caused at Staten Island, where the high tide carried the waters three-quarters of a mile inland and drove 1,500 from their homes.

Damage there was estimated at a million dollars. About 200 families were rescued from their dwellings.

Coney Island escaped practically undamaged. On Manhattan Island, pedestrians were forced to wade through several inches of sleet and slush, which also caused many traffic accidents. Cellars in the lower end of the island were flooded when the tide, rising to within ten inches of the top of the Battery wall, seeped through.

Tales of Rescues.

Thrilling tales of rescues came from all points. Three men aboard the tug West Point, which went aground on Little Beach Island near Atlantic City, were rescued by coast guards by means of a breeches buoy. Coast guardsmen also kept watch on several other vessels that were not in immediate danger.

Another rescue was that of James Inkle, New York banker, his wife, their three children, and three other persons who were taken to a restaurant from their summer home at South Beach, Spotwich, N. J., where they had been trapped.

U. S. Marines Guard Railways In Nicaragua

Indicating That United States Is Determined to Prevent Fighting in Towns Where Americans and Other Foreigners Are in Business—Borah Renews Attack.

Washington, Feb. 21 (AP).—American warships have landed 800 marines and bluejackets in Nicaragua for the announced purpose of keeping open railroad communication between Corinto and Managua and to provide further protection for Americans and foreigners.

The forces were put ashore at Corinto Sunday morning. News of their landing came late last night after the state department had formally announced that Minister Eberhardt at Managua and Rear Admiral Latimer, commanding the United States special service squadron in Nicaraguan waters, had found it advisable to place a sizeable guard along the railway.

Approximately 350 of the men will be stationed at Chinandega, where heavy fighting occurred recently between the Conservative and Liberal factions, interrupting for a time through traffic on the Managua-Corinto Railroad. Four hundred marines and bluejackets will be sent to Leon, while the others will be scattered along the railway to guard bridges and water tanks.

Landing of the additional American naval forces was said by the state department to have been carried out "with the full consent and approval of the Nicaraguan government."

Belief that further Liberal attacks were probable on points now in the hands of the Conservatives on or near the railway is understood to have influenced in large measure the decision of the American minister and Admiral Latimer.

Although the marine guard at Managua took supplies for three months with it to insure against any shortage due to interruption of the railway, the landing of the additional forces indicates that the United States is now determined to keep open communication between the American legation and legation guards at Managua and the sea, and to prevent fighting in towns where Americans and other foreigners are engaged in business.

Renewing his attack on the Administration's Central American policy, Chairman Borah, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, told the American Jewish Congress here last night that this policy should not rest solely upon mahogany and oil or depend for its carrying out upon warships and marines.

"It ought to be regarded as a crime," he asserted, "to defend by force and with American marines a title or claim for property which can not stand the inspection of an arbitrator."

Deaths Increase From Alcoholism

Dr. Nicoll Appeals to U. S. Surgeon General for a National Conference—Cause of Death and Sickness of Ever Increasing Thousands.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 21 (AP).—A national conference to consider what he believes to be an alarming increase of deaths from alcoholism "fully as disturbing as the increase of deaths from cancer and heart disease," is suggested by Dr. Matthias Nicoll, Jr., state commissioner of health, in an appeal to the United States Surgeon General.

The conference, which would "discuss possible ways and means of prevention or reducing to a minimum this menace to the health of our country," will be called at Washington in May, Dr. Nicoll believes.

"Alcoholism in this country is at present the cause of death and sickness of ever increasing thousands," Dr. Nicoll says. "Whether it can be controlled or even modified by police regulations remains to be shown. That it is not being so controlled must be obvious to any unprejudiced mind."

Dr. Nicoll has prepared a chart which shows, as a result of a personal survey made since Christmas, that alcoholic deaths have risen swiftly since 1920.

"In Florida the 1926 rate," Dr. Nicoll discloses, "was nearly three and one-fourth times that of 1920; in Minnesota it was five times that of 1920. In New York the rate was almost six times. For the whole United States registration area, the rate in 1926 was over three and a half times what it was in 1920."

Dr. Nicoll also points out that the records of one insurance company reveal that alcoholism accounted for 2,270 deaths in sixteen million insured policy holders in this country while of the million policy holders residing in Canada only 25 deaths occurred from this cause.

Man Is Found Badly Frozen

Richard DuBois, Painter by Trade, Had Lain All Night in U. & D. Railroad Rock Cut Off Hasbrouck Avenue—Hands Turned Black From Exposure.

This morning about 8 o'clock while Policeman Robert F. Healey was patroling his beat on lower Hasbrouck avenue he saw the body of a man lying in the rock cut of the Ulster & Delaware railroad, just off Hasbrouck avenue, near the Rondout yard of the railroad, and rousing the man, who had been overcome by exposure, he found it was Richard DuBois, a painter by trade, of this city.

Officer Healey sent a telephone call to police headquarters for the police car and while waiting for it questioned DuBois, who was rather hazy as to the details of what had happened but said he had lain all night in the rock cut.

DuBois's hands and feet were badly frozen. His hands had turned black, and he had sustained a cut on the head and his nose bled profusely. His condition was such that Sergeant James V. Simpson took the matter up with Superintendent Thomas H. Edmonston of the City Home who directed that DuBois be removed to the Benedictine Hospital for treatment.

DuBois is well known in the down town section of the city and had done many odd jobs of painting about town.

Shanghai Strike Eases With Death Penalty in Force

Reliable Sources Place Number of Beheadings at 28—Tso-Tin Strikes Snag In Drive By March Through Honan Province.

Shanghai, Feb. 21 (AP).—The sword, wielded swiftly to behead strike fomenters, was used in the native section of Shanghai today to combat the pen of nationalist propaganda.

Continuing a death-dealing program started yesterday under orders of General Li Pao-Chang, defense commissioner of Shanghai, to check the spread of general strike ordered Saturday, executioners with large swords patrolled the streets, and summarily, without semblance of a trial, decapitated on the spot men found making seditious speeches or distributing strike literature.

Reliable Chinese sources placed the number of beheadings at 28 of which 16 were carried out today, while the nationalists declared that there had been 90

The strike was called allegedly for economic reasons, but in reality to celebrate the recent Nationalist victory in Chekiang province and their subsequent capture of Hangchow, important center 113 miles southwest of here, from the forces of Marshal Sun Chang-Fang.

Strike activities lessened today even in the foreign settlements beyond the jurisdiction of the Chinese authorities, and the natives started an exodus from the Chinese section to the protection of the foreign area

Setback For Tso-Lin.

Although the situation on the battle front south of here remained about in status quo, Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, generalissimo of the northern forces, struck a snag in his projected drive against the southerners by a march through Honan province when forces of General Wu Pei-Pu, nominal master of the state, disarmed a number of Chang Tso-Lin's soldiers and seized an ammunition train.

Reports of this setback were received here after it had been made known that the generalissimo had telegraphed Wu pleading that he be allowed to send soldiers through Honan. However, the incident was not taken as an indication that Wu will oppose the northern commander in the present campaign, although Wu and Chang have been at loggerheads several times in recent years.

Stores Reopened Today.

The department stores of Shanghai foreign settlements, which closed Saturday, reopened today and some of the mill hands who joined in the walkout returned to work. Busses resumed operation on a skeletonized basis, but other transportation services remained at a standstill.

The city also continued without postal service, the post office being locked and picketed. Eight hundred strikers held virtual possession of the Central Post Office, preventing the clerical force from going to work. Newspapers have suspended owing to the workers' demands that they print the entire strike story. The journals are unwilling to do this, fearing the repressions of General Li, a subordinate of Marshal Sun.

"POISON" PAPER WRAPPER FOUND IN DEAD MAN'S ROOM.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Feb. 21 (AP).—William Watson, 55, Niagara Falls, Ont., was found dead in a room at the Frontier House here last night.

Watson engaged a room yesterday afternoon, leaving a call for 8 p. m. When he did not answer repeated calls, employes of the hotel opened the door of his room and found him dead.

Under the pillow on which his head lay police discovered $102, a gold watch and three gold rings. Coroner Harry R. Emos is investigating the case. A paper wrapper marked "poison" was found in the room.

SCHOOL OF CATFISH ATTACK SWIMMERS

Montevideo, Uruguay, Feb. 21 (AP).—Ramirez Beach, where the people of Montevideo seek relief from the sweltering heat of the South American summer, became a place of panic yesterday afternoon when bathers were attacked by a school of catfish.

In rapid succession men and women suddenly shouted for help and made for shore. More than seventy persons were bitten, mostly on the legs.

Berkshire Trail Closed.

Pittsfield, Mass., Feb. 21 (AP).—The Berkshire Trail, the main highway between Dalton and Northampton, is closed because of the heavy fall of snow, followed by drifting. The Pittsfield-Albany road is virtually closed, although one or two automobiles have managed to get over Lebanon mountain, now marked failing here again today.

Five Deaths in Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 21 (AP).—Besides traceable to the abundance of snow and the cold weather reached a total of five in the Pittsburgh district today. Among the victims was a boy who was found frozen to death in a toolbox in which he had sought protection while on an errand.

Trapped Miners Rescued Alive

Three Employes of Glen Alden Coal Company Are Resting Quietly After 26 Hours' Imprisonment Behind a Fall of Rock and Coal.

Scranton, Pa., Feb. 21 (AP).—After 26 hours' imprisonment behind a fall of rock and coal deep down in the Archbald mine, three employes of the Glen Alden Coal Company were resting quietly at their homes today, unaffected by their experience

The miners, Michael Claybek, Peter Slucck and Stanley Glinko, were trapped Saturday night in the underground working when the roof of the mine caved in. Eighty feet of the gangway was filled with tons of debris.

The men were uninjured and were plentifully supplied with lumber for timbering to prevent another cave-in. The air in the mine was good and the only thing that hampered the entombed miners were empty dinner pails.

Rescuers mobilized by the company started work as soon as the alarm was given but they were unable to establish communication with the prisoners until 18 hours later when faint sounds of voices came from behind the massive barrier. It was feared that the victims had been crushed to death and the discovery that they were alive gave added impetus to the rescue workers. But they had to proceed cautiously, timbering as they dug, as there was continual danger of another fall

Claybek, an experienced miner, who took charge of the situation when he discovered that he and his companions were trapped, said none of the party had lost hope. They set to work at once devising ways of escape and had removed much of the debris blocking their passage when the rescuers pierced an opening large enough to take them out.

Ulster County Roads Are Open

County Equipment at Work Continuously—Southern Part of County Hit Hardest by Storm—Busses' Delays Only Trivial.

Despite the heavy wind that swept this section and greatly hampered the work of opening the roads, all the highways of the county are reported as cleared after continuous work for twenty-four hours a day by the entire county equipment of tractors, plows and trucks

Southern portions of the county were hit hardest by the miniature blizzard that broke Friday evening and continued Saturday and Sunday. In the vicinity of Modena, Gardiner and New Paltz the roads were heavily drifted. The road to Pine Hill was covered by heavy snow but there were no drifts and it was kept passable during the whole storm. The roads to the Greene county and Orange county lines were also effectively cleared. The Saugerties road gave little difficulty and was also kept open.

The strong gale that raged during the storm greatly impeded the progress of the workers for as the roads would become cleared the wind would blow them shut again. It was necessary to plow some roads several times. The Ellenville highway was gone over twice by the plows owing to the work of the wind.

Although the roads are passable the road machinery is still in operation widening the various highways.

The autobus drivers who use the parking grounds at the Van-Ross Hotel, Crown street, said delays had been trivial. The Woodstock, Saugerties, Glasco, Pine Hill bus drivers said that there were some drifts. At Margaretville there were bad drifts, and between Napanoch and Ellenville the heavy drifts were overcome by the big snow plows.

Supervisor Daniel Shaw of New Paltz, who was in town, said that there had been some drifts to overcome from Highland to New Paltz and from New Paltz to Modena.

When she arrived he jumped.

Ice Gorge Halted Ferry; Tug Rob Was Fast In Ice

Terrific Wind Storm of Sunday Blocked Creek Mouth and Water Overflowed Docks Along Creek Front—Tug Rob Caught In Ice For Several Hours—No Ferry Service Sunday—Service Resumed Today.

Kingston was without ferry service for the first time this winter on Sunday when the terrific wind storm that jammed the mouth of the Rondout creek with an ice gorge through which the ferry Transport and Cornell Line tug Rob were unable to battle a way. The tug Rob as it attempted to make a passage through the ice gorge about 9 o'clock that afternoon that she was on the ice and was unable to free herself, and it was not until 3 o'clock that afternoon that she was finally pulled off the ice by the ferry Transport.

This morning another attempt was made to break through the ice gorge when the tug Rob and the ferry Transport left the Rondout creek on the 6.30 o'clock trip, and it was not until 9 o'clock that they were able to reach the opposite side of the river. After the track was once opened, however, almost normal ferry service was maintained for the remainder of the day.

High Wind Caused Trouble.

The ferry Transport had not missed a day's running this winter before Sunday, except for the two Sundays that she was pulled off the route so that necessary repairs could be made to the ferry landings on both sides of the river, and while she was not running the tug Rob made the regular trips in her stead

The heavy wind of Sunday caused the ferry to cease operations for the first time this winter. The wind piled up the broken ice, slush and snow into a huge mass that choked the mouth of the Rondout creek, forming an ice gorge.

Wind and Ice Won Victory.

If it had not been for the high wind, however, the ferry might have been able to battle her way through the gorge, but when she attempted to buck the ice the high wind caught her in its grip and swirled her around in a half circle so that the force of her blows were lost on the ice pack.

The tug Rob fared no better for in the grip of the wind she was unable to hit the ice pack head-on, but was swung in a half circle. It was while battling with the wind and ice that the tug ran half way up on the ice field, and was unable to loose herself under her own power.

Ropes Not Strong Enough.

She blew for help and the ferry ran out to the mouth of the creek to her assistance. Lines of rope were stretched and the ferry attempted to pull the Rob back into the water, but the ropes were not strong enough to stand the heavy strain and snapped.

From 9 o'clock in the morning until 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon attempts to haul the Rob off the ice failed, and it was not until a heavy iron chain was obtained at the Cornell shops and used as a tow line that the ferry was able to pull the Rob clear.

Tug Not Damaged.

The Rob was not damaged by being caught in the ice, and as the high wind still continued to sweep over the Hudson river it was finally decided to give up all attempts to battle a way through the ice gorge as long as the wind held.

Broke Through Today.

Early this morning the work of breaking a track through the ice gorge was started and as there was only a slight wind blowing, the boats were able to hit the ice pack hard on and after considerable time were able to batter a way through the gorge and across the Hudson river where the Rob pulled into the Rhinecliff slip at about 8 o'clock.

During the remainder of the day there was not much difficulty experienced in keeping the ferry track open and the ferry was able to keep close to running schedule.

Highest Water in Some Time.

The terrific wind that swept over the Hudson river valley on Sunday also caused the highest water in some time, and many of the docks along the Rondout creek front were under water, especially those docks along the creek in Port Ewen and at Wilbur.

The water reached its highest level at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon but subsided later without causing any damage.

Today the water was about normal

6 Bodies of Brave Coast Guard Crew In Churning Sea

Eight Members of Coast Guard Crew Lost Plucky All-night Fight Against Death By One Hour—Six Bodies Unclaimed. Will Investigate Tragedy.

Provincetown, Mass., Feb. 21 (AP).—Somewhere in the churning sea off High Head today were the bodies of six gallant members of the crew of the coast guard picket boat 238, who lost by one hour a plucky all-night fight against death in one of the wildest northeasters that has scourged Cape Cod in 30 years

Ashore, their comrades, who had watched helplessly the grim tragedy on a bar a few hundred yards from the beach, waited to reclaim them.

Two of the dead were pulled from the raging surf late yesterday, a few hours after the craft, disabled in motor power and radio, had been swept to destruction.

The gale, which attained a velocity of 75 miles an hour at its height Sunday, continued with lessening force today but lashed sleet before it stung the beaches patrol and coated the shore with a treacherous covering of ice.

Giant combers broke over the sand bar where the 75 foot picket boat went down and no trace of her remained.

It was 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon when the little craft was first sighted through the murk of the blizzard on the Atlantic side of the cape and near the tip. Flashing blinker lights told watchers at the High Head tower that its engines had gone dead and its radio powerless.

Realized Peril.

Boatswain Jesse K. Rivenback, her commander, who was making his first trip as an executive officer, evidently realized his peril for his message for help was urgent.

His plea was relayed to the coast guard base in East Boston and within the hour two destroyers, the Paulding and the Jouette, were steaming to sea with two cutters following closely.

At that time the 238 was three miles off shore with two anchors overboard and a tremendous sea running. Crews from three guard stations packed the shore with guns and breeches buoys, waiting the chance to rescue that was never to come.

Soon the whirling snow and darkness closed in but the lights of the picket boat could still be seen, and the appearance of a large steamer but a short distance away gave momentary hope to the anxious watchers on shore.

The guardsmen signalled frantically to the steamer which, however kept its course and soon disappeared. Then the storm swallowed the 238 and she passed from sight of those on shore.

Lone Fight by an Hour.

With the racing destroyers less than an hour away the picket boat and those aboard met their fate at 5 a. m., Sunday. A watch on the body of one of the two men swept ashore showed the hour at which the sea had stopped its mechanism and claimed its owner's life.

A coast guard board of inquiry was on its way here today to investigate the tragedy. Four warrant officers from the East Boston base comprised its personnel and among other things it will seek to learn the identity of the steamer which passed the doomed craft.

Beside Boatswain Rivenback the victims were Raymond H. Clark of Dorchester and Charles A. Freebury, Philadelphia, whose bodies were found; Cornelius Shea, Charlestown, Frank C. McCausland, Waterville, Me.; Joseph V. Maxim, Dorchester; Leo S. Krzyzanowski, Chicago, and Clarence Alexander, Greenville, S. C.

Some damage was done to the truck

Gun Toters May Be Disarmed

Federal Parliament Now Considering Bill Which Would Virtually Disarm All Civilians—Principal Opposition Comes From Sportsmen.

Ottawa, Feb. 21 (AP).—A bill which would virtually disarm all civilians in Canada is now before the federal parliament. The measure, fostered by Senator N. A. Belcourt, would place drastic restrictions not only upon fire arms but upon knives, bayonets, sling shots, sand bags and knuckle dusters.

Senator Belcourt has the support of the senate for his bill but there will likely be considerable opposition in the House of Commons mostly from sportsmen and retail merchants interested in the sale of sporting weapons. Senior police officials have been called before a senate committee to give expert evidence on the regulations regarding fire arms and other weapons, and most of them have approved of the bill.

The proposed legislation would not only require the registration of weapons but would substantially increase the penalties in the present law for the concealing or carrying of arms. The Minister of Juselet would be in charge of the administration. Manufacturers, importers and retailers would be strictly licensed by the department of justice. Only persons holding permits from authorized senior police officials would be permitted to own weapons of any kind. Any sale or transfer of weapons between private citizens would have to be recorded. Dealers would have to keep a strict record not only of sales but of repairs and replacements.

Military and Naval forces of Canada, officers of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, officers of the Crown, and police of provinces or municipalities would be exempt from the regulations respecting permits. Weapons would be permitted as part of ship equipment. Museums and private collectors would be allowed to have them as souvenirs or relics. But with these exceptions, permits could be issued only by police officials for 12 months at a time.

At the last session of parliament, Senator Belcourt's bill passed the Senate but did not pass the House of Commons on account of the abrupt dissolution of parliament. This year the controversy has been re-opened. Manufacturers, retailers and sportsmen are opposing the legislation in its committee stages on the grounds that although there should be some restriction in order to curb criminals, the proposed measure would have a distinctly restraining effect upon the sporting life of the country. The bill will undoubtedly find more opposition in the Commons than in the Senate, and it is doubtful if it will be passed in its present form, although it may become law considerably amended.

Traffic Rules for Health Highway

State Health Department Formulates Rules for Guidance of Public in Traveling Toward Health and Also for Care of Equipment.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 21 (AP).—"Ten traffic rules for the public health highway", compiled by Dr. C. R. Hervey of Oswego, district state health officer, are published in the current issue of Health News, the publication of the State Department of Health. The list follows:

"1. Keep your lights adjusted. There may be some dark times yet in public health and you will need a good focus to your mental lenses.

"2. Be sure you know where your gears are meshed before letting in your clutch. You might go backward instead of forward.

"3. Cross intersections cautiously. The public health highway passes many a dangerous crossing. Slow down and look both ways before claiming the right of way.

"4. Keep on the public health right of way. Sideswipings, jams and ditchings have occurred at the intersections of public and private health highways.

"5. Have serviceable brakes. The public health highway is crowded with reckless drivers, and with slow moving vans and trucks. Good brakes used with good judgment, will often prevent accidents.

"6. Be sure you signal before passing the organized medicine van and watch carefully when behind it. It hates to be passed and it sometimes backs up unexpectedly.

"7. Drive carefully on wet roads. There are many stormy days on the public health highway. Don't slam on your brakes. You may skid into a ditch.

"8. Test your steering gear frequently. Good intentions with a bad steering gear have landed many on the scrap heap.

"9. Don't toot your horn all the time. Mild tootings are permitted for warnings, bold tootings on the open road, but when real danger threatens blow as hard as possible.

"10. The use of the cutout is prohibited, and a suitable muffler is required. There is enough noise on the public health highway without additional disturbances from your exhaust gas."

Care of Equipment.

Dr. Hervey offers the following rules "for care of equipment:

"1. If you have labored going, with much noise, perhaps your mixture is too thin. There may be dust in the sieve or perhaps you are running out of gas. Adjust your mental carburetor, keep the flow free and have plenty of high power gas in your think tank.

"2. Be sure that your magneto is in good order. You can't run on the public health highway without a snappy spark. The spark of energy forces action in the mixture from your tank.

"3. Keep your spark plugs free of oil and smudge. The oil of gladness is the best lubricator, but too much oiliness will foul your plugs. Have plenty but not too much of this oil. It will avoid friction and it promotes smooth running.

"4. Have a good starting battery. If you can't start your machine you will never get along. Starting is as important as going and arriving.

"5. See that you have durable tires with the firm fabric of logic and the thick tread of established truth. Fewer blowouts and punctures will occur.

"6. The differential should be well greased. It is this mechanism which gets you around the curves and twists in the road without straining your drive.

"7. Keep your generator in good condition. This will insure a full battery of ideas and you can depend on a good start anywhere on the public health road.

"8. Consider your transmission. Let the clutch in slowly when starting. There is no use in crashing your gears. Do not make a jump start but go into low and be slow but sure. You will stall your engine if you start in high. If you shift at speed you will strip your gears and you can go neither forward nor backward.

"9. Keep your machine in good condition. Enamel it with good manners. Wash it with the water of good intention. Shine it with a polish composed of smiling patience, sympathy and self confidence and it need take no one's dust on the public health or any other highway."

Rations for Fighters

During the World war the German soldiers were supplied with tea and coffee without milk. Small rations of rum and arrack were furnished to troops in field and camp. These rations were given out in the evening to be mixed with the tea. Fifteen to twenty men received one bottle. In times of great physical exertion, the allowance of sugar was increased.

Your Income Tax

Pensions paid by a corporation or individual to retired employes for services rendered are taxable. Pensions paid by the United States Government are also taxable, except as provided by the revenue act of 1926, which exempts "amounts received as compensation, family allotments, and allowances under the provisions of the war risk insurance and vocational rehabilitation acts, or the World War veterans' act, 1924, or as pensions from the United States for service of the beneficiary or another in the military or naval forces of the United States in time of war, or as a State pension for services rendered by the beneficiary or another for which the State is paying a pension."

Allowances, whether paid by the Federal or State Governments, or private individuals to one who performed no duties, as, for example, a widow in recognition of services performed by her husband, are regarded as gifts and are not taxable.

A bonus paid by a State to its residents who served in the military or naval services during the war with Germany does not constitute taxable income.

Benefits paid by a labor union to members while on strike are to be included in the income, subject to tax, of such members.

An allowance paid a retired clergyman by the governing body of a religious denomination is taxable income.

Annuities paid retired civil-service employes of the Federal Government are subject to the tax to the extent that the aggregate amount of payments exceed the aggregate amount withheld from the salaries of the employes.

Night to Be Remembered

The "Big Wind" occurred in Ireland on the night of January 6, 1839. In Limerick, Galway and Athlone hundreds of houses were blown down and hundreds more were burned by the spreading of fires from those blown down. It was called "The Big Wind," because it is the worst of its kind known to the people of Ireland.

Special Show for Ford Products

Millard & Son, Local Distributors, to Hold Spring Show in Millard Building March 1-5 Inclusive.

James Millard & Son, distributors of the Ford products in this city, will hold a spring automobile show at the Millard building, opposite the central post office, on March 1 to 5 inclusive. At that time the two floors of the Millard building will be transformed into a huge show room where the Ford products will be displayed.

Various products manufactured by Henry Ford will be shown with the Ford car, Lincoln car and the Fordson tractors as the center of attraction. All of the various models of open and closed Ford pleasure cars will be shown. Several models of the Lincoln car will be exhibited. A feature of the Lincoln will be the new six brake system introduced by Ford. This system gives four wheel braking on front and rear wheels with the foot brake as is customary on four wheel brake cars but in addition the emergency brake is designed to act both externally and internally on the rear wheels, thus giving double the usual braking effect of the emergency.

To Show Ford Movies.

The spring Ford show will be open afternoons and evenings and there will be a program of music and entertainment both afternoon and evening. One of the features will be the showing of 10,000 feet of motion pictures showing Ford's railroads, the building of Lincoln cars, construction of Ford aeroplanes, the four seasons with a Fordson tractor, making a Champion spark-plug, which shows the transformation of the material from the time it is mined until the plug is completed. The building of Ford cars will also be shown and also a film showing power farming by Fordson. In addition there will be educational films, U. S. Navy films and the musical program.

There will be no admission charged to the Ford display and this will afford an excellent opportunity for the public to inspect the new show rooms which have recently been completed by the Messrs. Millard.

Tractors Ready For Operation.

Pleasure cars including two new Lincoln models will be shown on the first floor and on the second floor will be the display of Ford trucks. Tractors and special farm equipment and industrial equipment will be shown. These exhibits will be set up ready for operation. Several new style truck bodies will also be shown at the show.

In connection with the Ford and Lincoln displays there will be cut away models of the various mechanical parts showing the operation of the various parts. A special accessory exhibit will be shown and during show week there will be special show prices on Firestone tires and Ford batteries.

The public is invited to attend the show which will be entirely free and at the same time inspect the modern building which has been erected by the Millard Company to house and service the Ford products in this locality.

Jumper Outfit in Favor at Resorts

Materials Include Ensemble Effects in Gay Checks and in Dots.

From this time until spring is well on the way the scene of activities in the world of fashion will be largely south of the Mason and Dixon line. The winter vacation becomes each year more general and is now a thing for which extensive preparations are made. Paris couturiers and American dressmakers, observes a fashion writer in the New York Times, are keenly aware of the importance of the southern resort season, with its rivalries, and create for it their artistic best in styles. Palm Beach has became a label for dress of the type required for the southern winter season, but the playgrounds are many and the horizon of sunny lands is wide. There are all the resorts and clubs at all the semitropical inland places and waters, the mountains, springs, beaches and pine woods, to which the world of fashion travels, with proper equipment, which means a harvest time for designers and merchants.

Each of the fashionable winter resorts is a style center for which a definite type of dress is required. The most varied and elaborate wardrobe is, of course, for the seashore places. For these, one whose social activities are general selects costumes for many occasions—for morning, noon and night. There must be up-to-date clothes for the beach and the ballroom, for the tennis court and golf grounds and for the tea garden.

An entirely different outfit is needed for the country clubs at the springs and in the mountains. There are more sports clothes, for riding, hiking, golfing and for general wear, where the changes are less arduous. In the smartest communities evening dress is distinctly important and the latest things in gowns, wraps and accessories are worn for the dinners and dances.

Because of the prominence given to outdoor affairs, sports dress is particularly attractive, and the most swagger sports clothes seen in years have been designed for this season. New fabrics, new colors and original combinations are the features most conspicuous, with a tendency to more femininity in style. This applies to all of the season's fashions and particularly to southern resort togs, which also forecast to some extent the styles for early spring.

The Traveling Costume.

Whatever the destination, the first requirement of a journey southward is a traveling outfit. This year a definite type is evident in the traveling costume which will serve for many knockabout occasions as the season goes on. The jumper two-piece—the suit which is in effect a two-piece, but in reality all one garment—and the one-piece part of an ensemble, the sort of frock that was introduced as the coat dress a few years ago, are all being worn. Ensemble is the term which describes the most fashionable and practical style in dress, and material is largely an individual matter. Crepe and silk are the preference for some who wear a heavier sort of outer wrap, but the lightweight woolens are having a tremendous vogue because of the particularly fine fibers of the new weaves.

Among the many fabrics shown in the latest costumes designed for travel and general wear are small birdseye checks and fine tweeds, rayn, cashmeres and wool crepes. These are used for ensembles, for suits and for one-piece dresses in several arrangements and combinations of materials. Some conventional checks and dots in prints of two or three tones are introduced in the dress and for the lining of the coat. It is usual to carry the fabric of the dress over as a lining for the topcoat, a manner of handling that is both smart and serviceable.

Some of the newest materials, wool or wool and silk interwoven, are as light as pure silk or crepe, charming and grateful in ensembles and of infinite service for southern wear. There are, for example, the fine reps almost as thin and as closely woven as voiling, suitable for ensembles that will be worn going South and for early spring in the North. These are shown in plain colors—browns, blues, beiges and greens—which in the making are trimmed with brilliant dashes of color. Then there are the reversible checks, stripes, arrowheads, overpatterned, some of them showing the design in infinitesimal checks, refined, dainty and having an unmistakable quality of elegance. Some of the most attractive of these materials have a foundation of wool exceedingly fine, with the pattern traced in silk.

Two-Tone Silk Dress for Morning or Afternoon Wear.

Among the finer fabrics of this type is a taffeta de laine, light and delicate as thistledown, closely woven, with a small block pattern outlined in silk. This material has something of the character of mohair and of slightly more weight than silk, but an especially happy choice for a climate of warm days and cool evenings in the open. It is slightly more elaborate than the heavier woolens and makes charming frocks and ensembles for the younger women. These featherweight woolens and others with one thread of silk are designed for the more feminine sports dress, such as a woman will wear for lunch or tea at a mountain or seaside and are particularly fetching in light and bright colors with white. With these jumper suits and with the smartly tailored and plaited skirts are worn blouses of new and quite lovely design. These are, of course, of silk or crepe in plain colors, worked up with minute pin tucks, and much fagoting and drawn work is being used. The best of these are done altogether by hand, although there are to be had many attractive blouses in which the exquisite styles are reproduced by machine.

In some original models received from Jenny and Jane Regny, a one-piece frock is really all in one, the bodice being joined to the skirt at a low waistline which is really about the hips. In each of these the bodice of white wool is trimmed in geometric pattern, done with the material of the skirt, which is black or colored satin crepe. In one from Jenny the skirt is of black satin plaited and the sleeves are made of this, with bands appliqued at wide spaced intervals around the bodice. In another from the same house pale green crepe is trimmed with bands of dark green cloth, which is plaited in with the material of the skirt and appliqued in curving bands at the neck, down one side of the blouse and as a fancy belt.

Combination of Fabrics.

Treatment by Jane Regny of two fabrics in combination in rather different and more striking: she uses very wide bands of contrasting colors and bold patterns. The colors of these frocks of Parisian authorship are of several styles. On one model the neck is cut round, with the usual circling cluster of beads. Another is slashed in a shallow V, as the edges are turned back to form coat-like revers. In another model the blouse is cut high and buttoned at one side, following the line with which the frock itself is finished. The high-cut neck, with a cravat tied at one side, is considered the ultra-smart manner of finishing the blouse, bodice or jumper in a sports or semi-sports frock.

Skirts are new in cut and in the handling of the fabric, wool or silk, of which they are made. A conspicuous detail in the design of plaited and gathered skirts in particular is the opening of the fullness in front.

Paris millinery in the present season, as it is translated into the mode for this country, is an almost feminine affair.

STONE RIDGE P.-T. A. MAY SEND DELEGATE TO ITHACA

The regular monthly meeting of the Stone Ridge P.-T. A. was held Friday afternoon, February 18, at the school house. In spite of the bad weather, there was a very good attendance.

During the business of the meeting the president read a letter, announcing a coming P.-T. A. Institute at Ithaca. It was decided that Stone Ridge would have a delegate at that Institute if possible.

Mrs. Stephen Hart was in charge of the entertainment for the meeting. Several of the school girls added to the program by a patriotic song and a recitation appropriate to the coming of Washington's Birthday. Some of the members helped to read the Alphabet of Achievement which showed what a help the P.-T. A. is.

The collection which was taken for the Child Welfare Fund amounted to about eight dollars.

As this meeting was to celebrate Founder's Day, a birthday cake was brought in and the candles were lighted while a tribute to the founder was being read. Delicious home made cake and fruit punch were served during the social hour.

Pratts Acquire Arnold Company

Purchase Controlling Interest in C. N. Arnold Lumber Company of Poughkeepsie—Now Control Six Lumber Concerns.

Miss Katherine Arnold, president of the C. N. Arnold Lumber Company, has sold her controlling interest in the business to George W. Pratt and Harcourt J. Pratt of Highland, it was learned Sunday, says the Poughkeepsie Eagle News. The transaction was completed Saturday afternoon and the change will be effective March 1.

The Pratts already control five other lumber and coal companies in this vicinity but the local company will be their largest holding. George W. Pratt announced last night that there will be no change in the staff employed at the yard but the board of directors which meets soon, will be reorganized.

Miss Arnold was elected president upon the resignation of the Rev. Frederick H. Arnold, who has since made his home in Auburn. Negotiations for the sale of the controlling shares of stock have been under way for several weeks. The consideration has not been made public but is known to have been considerable.

The directors of the company are Miss Arnold, the Rev. Mr. Arnold, John Robinson, Robert Horsfall and Mr. Johnston, an attorney of New York.

Congressman Harcourt J. Pratt and George W. Pratt own the Beacon Lumber and Coal Company, the Marlborough Builders' Supply Company, the Kingston Lumber Corporation, the Hudson Coal and Lumber Company and the G. W. Pratt and Son Lumber Company of Highland.

The C. N. Arnold yard is one of the oldest in this section of the state, and has been supplying building materials for several generations.

THAT GRAND OLD PAPER

With George Washington's birthday at hand The Freeman office is again being deluged with inquiries as to the value of copies of The Ulster county Gazette bearing date of January 4, 1800, and containing an account of George Washington's funeral. Annually at this season there are many inquiries from all over the country. Many write that they would not part with their paper for any amount of cash while others offer it for sale at a fancy price.

There can be very few original copies of this paper in existence. Millions of re-prints, some of them now eighty years old, were widely circulated and are brought to light from family trunks, Bibles and other places where they have reposed for many years.

Inquiries have been so numerous that The Freeman has had printed a circular giving the history of this famous re-print which is mailed to anxious inquirers, most of whom persist, nevertheless, in the belief that the copies they have are originals.

SHAW'S SILLY CLAIM.

It is curious to what extent of untenable argument an ordinarily intelligent man may be led by his desire to forward a given policy. For example, here is Leslie M. Shaw boldly contending that Mr. Coolidge is now serving his first term on the ground that, although he took the oath of office on the death of President Harding, he continued to be only Vice President and merely "acted" as President until his election in 1924. Ex-Secretary Shaw says he told his former chief of this construction of the Constitution and that Mr. Coolidge was very much surprised. He naturally would have been, and not very agreeably, for the adoption of such a construction would have placed him in an embarrassing position.

Mr. Shaw seems to be unaware that if his view were accepted our list of Presidents would have to be cut down, that when John Tyler, the first Vice-President to take the office of a deceased President, announced that he was "called to the high office of the President of this Confederacy" he was misguided as to utterance as well as confused as to fact, and that Daniel Webster, then Secretary of State, shared in the general confusion when he addressed Tyler as "Mr. President." Commenting on Mr. Shaw's surprising utterance, the Philadelphia Record pointedly remarks: "It would strike the names of Tyler, Fillmore, Johnson and Arthur clear off the list of Presidents. The difference between the salaries which they received as Presidents over what they were entitled to as Vice-Presidents would have to be recovered from their estates. The Roosevelt estate would have to pay up the salary difference that he received during his first term. Likewise Mr. Coolidge. From what we understand about Mr. Coolidge as a business man he is unlikely to listen very long to the Shaw proposal."

THE SENATE'S "TRY-OUT".

The grave and critical comment on the prohibition situation, and the Government's methods of attempting to secure enforcement, officially made public by Dr. Charles Norris, chief medical examiner of the city of New York, contains a passage that relaxes the equally grave face of the reader into a smile. This passage, which calls to mind the "comic relief" introduced at intervals into even the most weepy of stage melodramas, reads as follows:

Summoned to Washington some months ago to testify at a Senate hearing, I had pointed out to me the sleek, well-dressed man who was known as the official bootlegger of certain Senators, and also I was shown a negro attendant, who was known as the official "try-out". If a new bootlegger arrived, the stuff was administered to the "try-out", and if he survived all was well.

Obviously this "try-out" with which the Senatorial retiring rooms is provided is a very obliging as well as very convenient negro, exhibiting all the good-nature and docility that have been noticeable in so many of his race. But what if this seldom remedy should give place to grim tragedy in true melodrama style? What if the Senatorial bootlegger should fail to get out all the poison which the Government's chemists have crowded in, and the convenient negro "try-out", who now serves Senators as the official cupbearers served ancient kings, should receive too heavy a dose and "croak" right there in the midst of Uncle Sam's palace of wisdom? The imagination is staggered at the vision of the stupendous scandal of such human sacrifice, brought about by Senatorial thirst but more directly attributable to the persistent grinding of the Government's poison-mill. For his own sake, and on all accounts, let us hope that the dark-skinned "try-out" will continue to survive his daily peril. Meanwhile it is pertinent to conjecture that no insurance company in its senses would touch him with a ten foot pole

THE REAL HEART TEST.

A professor of medicine makes this statement "We hear much today of the ravages of tuberculosis and cancer, but data from the United States Bureau of Census shows that in the total registration area of the United States, the death rate from kidney and heart disease is almost twice that of tuberculosis and cancer combined.

And when we remember that what has been called heart disease, that is heart murmurs, and little heart irregularities are not really serious and do not cause deaths, we can get some idea of the prevalence of heart disease proper.

It was really the Great War that gave physicians an opportunity of actually testing out heart conditions.

In the United States and Canada all cases of heart murmur and irregularities were weeded out as far as possible.

In France and England, where the need for men was most urgent, men with murmurs and irregularities were found to stand the preliminary training as well as their comrades who possessed normal hearts.

Then when the real hardships of war were undergone most of these men with the above conditions were able to do their work as well as the others.

The test of the health or strength of the heart was how it acted when it was given work to do.

Also those returned from the front, because of heart conditions, were carefully sorted out, according to the fatigue and breathlessness shown by doing certain exercises.

And the treatment of these conditions, that is where the heart was not damaged by infection of some kind, was graded physical exercises.

The point therefore is that despite the increase in heart ailments due to infection, the treatment in severe cases is proper food, suitable work, sufficient rest, and a fair amount of amusement.

Removing sources of infection such as teeth and tonsils is the first thought.

And for all cases, graded physical exercise under competent supervision means prolongation of life, according to Dr. Rabinowitch, of Montreal, Dr. Colton of London, England, and many other research workers.

Odors of Fish Kitchens Stir Berlin Shopkeepers

Berlin.—Popular fish kitchens, recently installed in Berlin after the model of London, may be all right, but a number of business men have launched protests with the police against the odor.

They approve the idea underlying the recent erection of fish kitchens in all sections of the city, namely, that of enabling even the worker of moderate means to get a warm meal at midday. But, they ask, why must these fish kitchens be domiciled on the main business streets, next to fashionable shops?

Among the most vociferous objectors are the owners of flower shops and perfume stores.

When the Pope Had a Rival

THE existence of a rival pope, Clement II, caused Pope Urban II to call upon all Christendom to join in the first crusade, a step that stirred medieval Europe to the greatest co-operative movement mankind has ever known and resulted in the establishment of the Christian Kingdom of Jerusalem.

From the Fourth century, when Christianity triumphed over paganism in Rome, it had been the custom of Christian devotees to make pilgrimages to the holy sepulcher at Jerusalem. The Byzantine empire had encouraged these visits, but the Seljuk Turks, who held Jerusalem in 1084, began persecuting pilgrims.

Peter the Hermit of Amiens, France, carried a message from the Greek Patriarch of Jerusalem to Pope Urban II, urging that the Holy city be delivered from the hands of the infidel. It was not the first appeal of the sort, but this pope found a new reason for undertaking an ambitious enterprise. The Germano-Roman emperor had set up a rival pope, Clement II, and Pope Urban II welcomed an opportunity to establish his authority over the Christian world. Hundreds of thousands enthusiastically volunteered for the crusade and private quarrels throughout Europe were forgotten. Monks seized swords, nobles sold their castles and even robbers joined the movement, which was called a "crusade" because the badge of enlistment was a red rose worn on the right shoulder.

Walter the Penniless led 60,000 across the French border before any organized movement was ready to start. Peter the Hermit followed with 40,000 more, and a third band, without a leader, numbered 200,000. It was believed that food and supplies would be miraculously provided by God and, when the miracle failed, the hordes lived on the land in passing.

By the time Godfrey of Bouillon arrived in the east, more than 300,000 crusaders had perished. After several battles with the Turks and Saracens, 40,000 knights survived to capture Jerusalem and set up the Christian Kingdom of Jerusalem, of which Godfrey of Bouillon became ruler as "Defender of the Holy Sepulcher." The kingdom lasted nearly a century.

Scientists Baffled by Mystery of Crystals

Although the comparatively modern science of crystallography has now satisfactorily explained the formation of crystals, and mathematics has charted their innumerable "faces" in respect to the angles, very little is definitely understood concerning certain conditions, as for instance the reasons for the pellucidity of crystals, or under what circumstances the ancients were led to use crystals, or beryls, in their practice of divination by means of "gazing."

The beautiful "glass stones" were for centuries considered to have supernatural abilities, and even today a large crystal is a part of the paraphernalia of most magicians, so-called. Spirits were supposed to make crystals their habitat, and Andrew Lang, famous British author, once declared that there might be something more than superstition attached to the reports of amazing things said to be read within the crystals of even the moderns.

Although the origin of crystallography is somewhat obscure, both Prof. M. Dumas of the College of France, and the eminent savant Prof. F. C. Calvert, credit Swedenborg, the extraordinary universal genius of the Eighteenth century, with having been the first to comprehensively set forth the reasons for crystallic formations, and with having computed and characterized the arrangement of crystal spheres and angles. Nicolas Stenno, fifty years earlier (1669), was probably the first of the moderns, at least, to give public utterance to some aspects of the subject.

Crystals, apart from their precious value, have been in commercial use in optics and for watch glasses, etc., while there is always some demand among jewelers for certain types. Recently, two magnificent imported Burmese crystals, cut by natives with small steel hatchets, were sold at a New York auction room for $50,000.

State Preparing To Meet Moths

Heavy Infestations in Western New England to be Checked With Intensive Drive—New Colonies Discovered Near State Line.

Albany, Feb. 21.—Some of the most severe gipsy moth infestations that have ever been reported have been discovered in western New England and New York state's gipsy moth control forces are being disposed to prevent this new influx of moths from obtaining lodgment in this state.

The newly discovered colonies of the moths are east of Rensselaer, Columbia and Dutchess counties and are near enough to the state line to permit the moths to get into New York during the coming summer unless held in check.

Henry L. McIntyre, of the Conservation Department who is in charge of the gipsy moth control work is planning to dispose his field forces so as to do the most effective work at the points threatened and clear out the moths as fast as they appear.

In preparation for the coming season's campaign a meeting was held in the offices of the Conservation Department which was attended by both state and federal officials who are directing the greatest insect exclusion campaign ever undertaken in this country. There were present: William G. Howard, superintendent of state forests; Dr. H. H. York, forest pathologist and Henry L. McIntyre, supervisor of gipsy moth control, all of the Conservation Department; A. F. Burgess, in charge Bureau of Entomology, Melrose Highlands, Mass.; S. S. Crossman, Bureau of Entomology, Melrose Highlands, Mass.; H. L. Blaisdell, in charge of Scouting and Extermination Work, Bureau of Entomology, Melrose Highlands, Mass.

The purpose of the conference was to outline the spring and summer campaign also to enable these men to get some first-hand information on other problems in which the Conservation Department is active, and further to increase the cooperation and team work between the members of the different Conservation bureaus which Commissioner Macdonald is striving to obtain.

What's Inside ?

THE woman who started out to fill her library only with books with red bindings, or books whose names suggest red—"Red Pepper Burns," "The Song of the Cardinal," "The Scarlet Letter"—made a whim the basis of her choice. She wasn't particularly interested in the merits of those books. Her aim was to fill up space.

YET when you buy books, you are concerned with what's inside them. And when you buy a flashlight, a refrigerator, a radio—you want wiser than whimsy buys. You want to know the inside goodness of those products, know it before you buy them, be persuaded by what's inside. You may hesitate between two flashlights. You can't tell by the appearance which is good, or which is better. Advertisements could tell you. They point out the underneathness of a product. The truths you can see, and the truths you can't see. The amount and strength of service to expect of what you see. Not just a refrigerator—but how long the ice lasts in it, how it makes lettuce crisp. And not only the now inside merits, but the future inside merits. It's these unseen nows and futures that make a product worth its price.

Read the advertisements. Then you can know a product to its center—to its last chapter of service—before you buy.

Knowing the advertisements habitually means always strength-buys

Read advertising often.

All girls who do not take part in any one of the three plays are to come to the meeting dressed as a character from a book with which they are familiar. There will be a grand march of all the girls. The costumes are to be planned by the girls themselves, and it is a rule for the day that no money is to be spent and that mothers may be consulted, but not asked to make the costumes. Suggestions for costumes are given by Mrs. D. W. Affleck and Miss Attrude Yerxa, Girl Reserve secretary. Parents, teachers and other friends are cordially invited to come to the meeting.

Foreign Travel Makes Strange Demands Upon Our Wardrobes—What to Wear in the Desert Is a Problem.

Cairo, Egypt — Stay-at-homes have little conception of the advantages they enjoy when planning their wardrobes. They know more or less the sort of clothes that are necessary in the everyday walks of life. They have a fair knowledge of the right proportions of day and evening dresses to purchase, and, what is more, they are always within range of some source of supply.

The traveler is at a distinct disadvantage. Unless she has traveled the ground before, or is more than wisely advised, it is about nine chances out of ten that she will not have the proper costumes for the unexpected occasions that invariably occur in traveling. There is, for instance, the matter of dressing for a three or four days' stay in the desert!

Silver Cloth Forms the Skirt and the Narrow Strips That Are Looped Over the Rose Velvet Blouse Section of an Evening Wrap Collared in White Fox.

True, this problem is a highly specialized one, one in which the world at large is not deeply concerned, but, for all that, it is a real problem when one is brought face to face with it. Certainly it seems to have little in common with current fashions. Indeed, all through the East, the tendency is, I think, to disparage current modes, and to instill a reverence for robes of lasting beauty.

One of the amusing incidents of Cairo hotel life is hearing women discuss what they shall take for desert equipment, and one of the most diverting spectacles is these women, smart in every walk of life, but incongruous to a degree in their modern clothes, balanced on the heaving back of a camel, himself gaily tasseled and hung with necklaces of colored stones. One finds then and there that the divided skirt is the only kind in which to cope with such a situation, and that a cape is distinctly better than anything fitted, no matter how smartly.

BLUE FROCKS AND THOSE OF ACE WORN BY OPERA AUDIENCE

Rayon Satin and Velvet Compose Effective Costumes—Untrimmed Velvet Evening Wraps in Bright Color.

Shades of blue, ranging from the light to the deep midnight tone, advanced the newer color note recently at the Metropolitan Opera House, when Jeritza sang the title role of "Tosca" to a crowded house.

While the popular choice throughout the Golden Horseshoe remained faithful to the white, flesh, rose, and green shades that have been so consistently sponsored throughout the winter season, it was upon blue that the attention centered. There was also considerable black.

Another detail that proved interesting was the amount of lace worn, most often metallic and posed over contrasting slips of satin. Black lace gowns were also sponsored. Mrs. Herman Oelrichs being among the proponents of the hosts to advocate this fabric.

Rather Lighter Than Skirt.

Satin rayon, rayon velvet, crepe satin, and the sheer materials constituted the range of accepted fabrics. A smart-looking young girl were one of the light blue frocks in crepe satin, the bodice made of the full side and the skirt of the lustrous surface of the material. This was draped and without trimming.

Several of the rayon velvet dresses contributed to the opera effect by having the bodice in a lighter tone than the skirt, and a direct contrast was offered by a striking costume in which the black satin skirt was topped by a bodice of gold cloth.

WHEN ENTERTAINING FRIENDS

We all wish to extend courtesies to our friends, and when we entertain them it is a pleasure to serve food that is pleasing, and if possible, unusual. Those who are deprived of home cooking enjoy best of all a good meal of substantial, well prepared food. The wise hostess fits the dinner to suit the needs and tastes of her guests.

There is no main dish more appetizing than a good ham well baked, served with creamed potatoes and glazed sweet potatoes, with a simple salad of some seasonable combination with the following dessert:

Hamburg Cream With Fruit Juice.—Put a cupful of raspberry and currant juice into a double boiler over the fire. Beat the yolks of nine eggs, add a cupful of sugar and beat again; add the juice scalding hot to the eggs and sugar, very slowly; return to the boiler to cook until thick. Remove from the heat and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of nine eggs. Serve chilled, in sherbet glasses with macaroons.

Frozen Boston Pudding.—Grate half a loaf of Boston brown bread that is at least a day old, pour over it a pint of hot cream, allowing it to stand until cold. Prepare a rich boiled custard by scalding a pint of milk and adding three well-beaten eggs and two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Cook until the custard coats the spoon. Cool, add the bread crumbs and half a pint of sweetened whipped cream. Flavor with a few drops of almond extract and turn at once into the freezer. When frozen, remove the cream to a flat pudding dish, cover with macaroon crumbs and bury in ice and salt until serving time.

Ginger Cobbler.—Cut into dice one pared cucumber; slice two oranges, three lemons, sprinkle with powdered sugar, add a cupful of ginger sirup and put on ice for two hours. Add two quarts of ginger ale, a cupful of sugar sirup and pour over a block of ice in a punch bowl. Garnish with raspberries or other bright fruit.

Mrs. Thomas Ewing, who has just returned from her honeymoon at Palm Beach, wore a yellow net frock delicately fronted with silver beading. A large corsage of orchids was posed at her girdle.

Square Decolletage Favored.

Blouses lyons were numerous, and sparkling embroidery, especially large silver disks, provided one of the sponsored modes of decoration, the latter applied either in scattered designs or in solid formation on the skirt.

Velvet wraps with shirred collars of soft material were noted in a number of different colors.

Sleeveless leather lines seem destined to the pink and rose tones, and long white gloves seem to be becoming more general in the Golden Horseshoe.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE CITY HUM

It didn't seem to make any difference to the city Teddy thought as he sat way up high and looked down at the buildings and roofs and the streets far below.

In His Daddy's Office.

Now it may sound as though he had a very dangerous seat, but it was not dangerous at all.

He was in his daddy's office and his daddy had his office high up in one of the city office buildings.

Outside there was everything going on.

There were automobiles rushing along the street or jammed all together so it appeared with the traffic.

Trucks of huge size were thundering along, too.

They were building in several places nearby, too, and the sounds of all the great machines were adding their notes to the general hum.

It seemed funny to Teddy as he sat and looked at all the buildings how much was going on and how little he seemed in the hugeness of the city.

It seemed as though if he yelled outside the window no one at all would hear him.

And it seemed so curious to think how big one felt at times and again how small one seemed.

When he went for walks in the woods and saw little flowers peeping up from under leaves and wee birds learning to fly and little frogs and toads hopping about he felt as though he were very big.

He felt as though he had so much power and he was glad that he had power and yet that he would never use it to hurt anything smaller than himself.

But here in the city it seemed as though everything else were so big and as though he were so small.

And yet he quite enjoyed it.

He loved sitting up in his daddy's office, looking out of the window, seeing the roofs of buildings and the tops of buildings and the river in the far distance.

In the Woods.

He loved seeing the sky and the clouds just over the buildings—or at least not so very far away.

And then it seemed so particularly wonderful.

One by one and then almost at once all the city lights came out and he looked over the city which seemed like fairyland, so big and with so many offices and buildings and houses and theaters and streets and people.

And up from the crowds, up from the buildings, up from the dazzling lights and the brilliant signs and the strange, wonderful thrill of it all, still came the city hum—the city which took all the voices and all the sounds to herself and then made them all into a lovely little humming song—all, all her very own.

Apple Without an Ache

Pauline, during her short life, had evidently had some painful experience with green apples.

She called in the grocery store to buy herself an apple. The grocer had on display two barrels, one of which contained apples, large and green, the other, apples small and red.

She picked up one of the large green apples and looked longingly, though rather dubiously at it, then rather reluctantly she lifted one of the small, red apples, and advancing to the salesman said, "Which of these apples ain't the stomach ache kind?"

Tragedy at Football

Uncle Robert took Bobby and his chum, Jean, to the high school football game. At the gates he was hailed by a young girl selling chrysanthemums and he bought a couple.

"I'll carry them till we get home," he told the children, "then you may each have one."

However, being jostled in the crowd, the head of one of the flowers was broken off.

"Oh, Mr. Robert," exclaimed Jean, tragically, "was that Bobby's or mine?"

With the Youngsters

"What's an appendix, Tommy?"

"An appendix is part of a dictionary."

"Tutut, either. It's what my Uncle Robert had cut out of him."

"Well, I guess maybe he swallowed his own words sometime."

OFFICE CAT

By Jean

What has become of the old-fashioned guest who insisted on helping with the dishes.

He: "You were no spring chicken when I married you."

She: "No, I was a little goose."

As Clear as Mud.

Today was tomorrow yesterday, but today is today, just as yesterday was today yesterday, but is yesterday today, and tomorrow will be today tomorrow, which makes today yesterday and tomorrow all at once. Now run along and play.

Film Star: "Will you love me when I am old?"

Third Husband: "Why, my dear, we'll be divorced long before that!"

Good luck is a lazy man's estimate of a worker's success.

Good Advice.

"Be sure you're right!"
We said. "And yet,
When you are sure,
Still do not bet!"

Friend: "Did your husband leave you much?"

Widow. "Yes, nearly every night."

If you falter under fire, you're not a fighter, you're a quitter; and the devil himself hates the man with a rubber spine. He smells bad burning.

Our Own Webster.

Slang: A cussword that doesn't last more than a few years.

Cussword: Slang that lasts forever.

In the old days if anybody missed a stage coach he was contented to wait two or three days for the next. Now he lets out a squawk if he misses one section of a revolving door.

Marriage Song.

Oh, there's pain in my breast;
In my heart there's a sigh,
Though I struggle my best,
There's a pain in my breast.
It's so hard to digest,
My Julia's first pie;
So there's pain in my breast;
In my heart there's a sigh.

A teacher asked her pupils to bring to school objects that represented songs.

One boy brought an apple, an other a banana, and a third an old whip.

"What song does the apple represent?" asked the teacher.

"In the Shade of That Old Apple Tree."

"What does the banana represent?"

"Yes, We Have No Bananas."

"And what does the whip represent?"

"Thanks for the Buggy Ride."

The old time business man used to refer to his office workers as "help".

Some people make you feel at home, others merely make you wish you were.

After Four You Begin Counting All Over.

We heard the other day of a Hollywood star who was somewhat sensitive when she went to get herself a license for her fourth—or was it fifth—marriage.

The clerk who made out the matrimonial ticket seemed to her to be darned inquisitive.

"Have you been married before," he queried, "and if so, to whom?"

This was too much. The air became sore. In her most polaric manner she demanded:

"What is this, a memory test?"

"Talk is cheap"—and oh how tiresome.

"Some one is trying to put something over on me," said the bathing beauty when the censor ordered a blanket for her.

COUNTY FOREST MAY BE STARTED IN ESSEX

Albany, Feb. 21.—Conservation Commissioner Alexander Macdonald has been advised by the clerk of the board of supervisors of Essex county that the board has appointed a county forestry committee consisting of Charles Waite of Crown Point, chairman, Horton J. Sullivan of Chesterfield and Albert Cliff of Keene, to work with the Conservation Department in the reforestation of lands in Essex county as recommended in the department's bulletin on Municipal or Community Forests.

Upon receipt of this notification, Commissioner Macdonald wrote to Chairman Waite giving him information as to what boards of supervisors may do and how they may act in regard to securing lands for reforesting purposes to assist him in the preparation of a definite program of county reforestation.

In the last twenty-five years approximately 119,000 acres of farm land, or eleven per cent of the total acreage of the county, has been abandoned for farm purposes and in addition to that, according to the United States census reports, there are 61,000 acres of unimproved land on farms which are neither improved nor in forests.

According to the records of the Conservation Department, there are now twenty-eight counties in which county land has been planted, but there are comparatively few counties where the boards of supervisors have adopted a definite reforesting program. The commissioner also advised Chairman Waite that the Conservation Department will train men to supervise plantings to be made in those county when the reforesting program is worked out and is ready at all times to confer with him or his committee and assist in the preparation of such a program.

AMATEUR NIGHTS FAST DYING OUT

Most Amusing Feature of Theater Will Soon Be but Fragrant Memory.

St. Louis.—One of the most cherished institutions of the stage is passing, and it is only a matter of time until it is entirely in the discard. Amateur night, that most amusing feature of the theater, will soon be a fragrant memory, a memory redolent with the aroma of standing "hams" who indulgently permitted themselves to be "put on the pan" for the edification of an audience that laughed with devilish glee at the crude antics of those who would be actors and were willing to pay the price of public harassment to attain the goal.

Amateur night is an institution as old as the theater itself. As its name suggests, it affords an opportunity for those who have ambitions for the stage to display their skill, a none too sympathetic audience sitting as judge and jury and by its vote of approval or disapproval denoting the degree of success with which the neophyte has put over his act. For some there were resounding bravos and tumultuous applause, and for others a silence that damned.

The Announcer's Speech.

The scenes at all amateur nights are virtually the same. The regular program is curtailed and some one steps out of the wings to the center of the stage. His speech is always the same:

"Ladies and Gentlemen: We have a little something extra on the program tonight, something that we think you will appreciate. We will ask you to give as close attention as possible, as we shall take a vote at the end of the performance to see what you like the best. First on the program tonight is little Margaret Brisk. Step out, Margaret. I thank you."

He retires and little Margaret skips toward the footlights. Margaret, it appears, is a mother's darling who is supposed to have a rare voice. So, in child soprano, she sings about "little birdies in the trees," and for an encore—she takes it whether she earns it or not—she vocalizes again on the influence a full bloom moon has on the spooning propensities of the sterner of the sex.

Wide Variety of Acts.

Five or six other acts follow in succession. Elmer, the demon hoofer from the levee district, does a buck and wing. The McGoofus sisters do a double—Cecilia at the piano, Molly with her mandolin. They both try to sing, too. Tom and Jerr, do a tumbling act and narrowly escape death as they essay a giant swing in midair. Arthur Tremont is a versatile chap. He sings tenor; he plays the saxophone; he juggles six balls simultaneously, and he can clog-dance. Arthur is pretty much of a vaudeville show in himself.

Sylvester and his crooning troubadours conclude the bill—an ambitious gang of syncopaters who may be commended for laudable zeal, but not for the harmony they dispense.

The announcer again steps out of the wings and raises his hand for silence. He requests all the performers to come back on the stage, and they obediently line up in a semi-circle behind him. He is speaking:

"Ladies and gentlemen: Well, you have seen the boys and girls perform, and now we will see who gets the big prize. I will pass behind the performers, and I will ask you to show by your applause whom you think is best." Only he doesn't say "whom"—"who" is better.

Picking the Winners.

He places his hand on little Margaret's head. A burst of handclapping. Margaret smiles and sticks her thumb in her mouth. Mother, in the front row, is gesturing wildly for her not to swallow it. Elmer apparently didn't register much with his hoofing—or maybe he didn't bring many of his friends to the theater. He doesn't do so well. The McGoofus sisters likewise get a lukewarm reception, and they make a sudden shift from dental display to sullen glares.

Tom and Jerry are remembered for that remarkable swing in midair and get a big hand. Arthur Tremont, the boy with the curly blond hair and the Ascot tie, goes over big, clearly outdistancing Sylvester and his crooning troubadours, who are obviously piqued at the inability of the audience to appreciate their syncopation.

Unable to Decide.

The announcer is speaking again:

"Ladies and gentlemen: Well, I can't quite decide who wins the big prize. Seems like Margaret and Tom and Jerry and Arthur Tremont are the favorites. So I'll ask you to vote on those three."

He places his hand on Margaret's head. The audience is more discriminating this time and she gets just a ripple of applause. Tom and Jerry also fail to make their first quota, and Arthur Tremont wins in a walk.

"Arthur Tremont got the big prize," says the announcer. "Who won the second prize?"

He points to Margaret. A few friends remain detailed, but she loses to Tom and Jerry. The announcer tells the audience so much and everybody is satisfied with the exception of Margaret's mother, who quite volubly insists that her daughter didn't get a square deal or something of the sort.

Season for Elimination.

Such is amateur night and, if St. Louis showmen are to be believed, such nights are passing from the theater never to return. The reason for their demise is simple, if one may take the word of the musical and stage director of one of the theaters.

"There is no longer an excuse for amateur actors to make a public show of themselves in order to get a hearing," he says. "The reason is found in the motion-picture theaters, which, within the last two years, have enlarged their field to include much more than the mere cinema presentations.

"Take St. Louis, for example. Originally all the motion-picture houses in the city were just that, theaters in which motion pictures were shown with an orchestra to furnish incidental music. But a great change has come over the profession. As soon as a theater ceases to be more than a mere neighborhood playhouse it goes in for stage production.

Stage Management a Problem.

"The best of theatrical talent is obtained for these shows. Stars from the legitimate willingly go to the movie houses because they make more money, even though they have to work harder. Stage management, strange as it may sound, has been a big problem for motion-picture theater managers for some time, and the field has by no means been expanded to its limit."

All of which being true, the question is, what does that have to do with the passing of amateur night?

He answers the question readily:

"Because of the fact that all the large motion-picture theaters are making stage presentations, they are naturally trying to recruit as much of their talent as possible right at home. Economic reasons, if no other, would prompt such action. The result is that in our theater, for instance, I hold semi-weekly auditions at which local performers are given ample opportunity to show just what they can do on the stage. The same is done elsewhere in the city."

Spyglass Bared Wife's Tryst, Is Told in Suit

New York.—Testimony of how her husband, his brother and a third man had perched themselves on the fence around Gramercy park and with the aid of a pair of strong fieldglasses spied through the windows of her apartment and observed her alleged actions with Dr. Russell McRobert, neurologist, enlivened the trial of separation action brought by Mrs. Edith Dornbush against William E. Dornbush.

The spyglass testimony was offered in support of Dornbush's counter claim for a divorce. Supplementing this testimony was the exciting narrative by Dornbush and others of a midnight raid upon a log cabin at a summer camp in Lake Portage, Maine, in which it was testified Doctor McRobert was found in the same cabin with Mrs. Dornbush, but in a different room, and that Mrs. Dornbush unsuccessfully tried to shoot her husband with an old-fashioned revolver.

Henry Bloodgood, who last summer was employed by a brokerage firm uptown, but is now about to go in business for himself, testified that he visited Dornbush in the latter's apartment in the Hotel Irving in Gramercy Park, and from there looked across the park and saw Mrs. Dornbush and Doctor McRobert get out of an automobile and go into Mrs. Dornbush's apartment.

Theater Man Dazed as He is Mailed $6,442

Mason City, Iowa.—Here's "a story for the book."

In his morning mail Tom Arthur, manager of the Cecil theater, received a sizeable package, and thought, "Wonder what that can be?" But his curiousity was not enough to cause him to open it then.

In the afternoon he came across the package again, which was addressed to "Thomas Arthur," and bore a Dubuque (Iowa) return address.

Within the outer covering he found a little cedar chest and this typewritten note: "Please accept this as payment of a debt of many years."

"It's either a bomb or a cigar humidor," he remarked. Then he found a key with which he opened the box. The lid flew open and a dollar bill appeared.

Then another, and a $10 bill; more of the same and a $100 bill; more of them, and the scene was climaxed with six $1,000 bills—$6,442 in all.

"I don't know what it's all about," he declared.

The return address proved to be a vacant lot in Dubuque.

Pigeons Cause for Meal Same Time Each Day

Milwaukee, Wis. — Thomas Koefert, an assistant in the city building inspector's department, is certain that pigeons think.

For a year he has been feeding the birds that hover about the building, perched at times on the window ledge. He has noticed that the birds start coming to the window just before the clock in St. Mary's church, a block away from his office, strikes the noon hour.

They seem to know, he says that noon is time to eat and he has found the pigeons as good as a watch in marking the noon hour.

Koefert was curious to see whether or not the birds came around on Sundays, and made two trips to the office on the holiday. The birds did not appear either time.

Rheumatic Remedies and Real Relief

One of our best known poets once declared in verse that there were 1057 remedies for rheumatism and not one of them worth a hang. He knew, for he had tried them all. It might be said that these remedies were a bit rheumatic themselves.

C. C. FROUDE.

Real relief for rheumatism cannot come out of a bottle, for there is a cause for the condition which medicine cannot reach, that cause being spinal irritation of the nerves serving the kidneys and bladder.

Chiropractic spinal adjustments will correct this cause!

RELIEF AT LAST.

"I have been a sufferer from so-called Rheumatism for over thirty years. I have tried other treatments, have taken medicine enough to drown me and tablets enough to bury me, all with practically no results. I have taken thirty spinal adjustments; was a nervous wreck when I started but am now at work and have earned over a hundred dollars since commencing adjustments, and am feeling fine. I advise every one that suffers as I did to get busy and do as I did."—Wm H. Martin, Chiropractic Research Bureau, Statement No. 2220-A.

Players Off for Training Camps

New York, Feb. 21 (AP)—The annual exodus to the baseball training camps—most welcome to fandom of all signs of spring—gets under way in earnest this week.

Members of the Washington Senators and St. Louis Browns already are in camp at Tampa and ...pon Springs, Fla., respectively. The first squad of the New York Giants was at Sarasota, Fla., today while group of Boston Braves were heading into St Petersburg, Fla., and several of the Philadelphia Athletics unloaded their bats and winter kinks at Fort Myers, Fla.

Immediate practice sessions were scheduled for the ambitious recruits and seasoned veterans.

Meanwhile the world champion St. Louis Cardinals pitched camp today at Avon Park, Fla., and a band of Cleveland Indians, under the direction of their new manager, Jack McAllister, were ready for preliminary stunts at Hot Springs, Ark., prior to official opening of the camp on March 1.

And a busy week of packing and travel lay ahead of many other clubs. Both the New York Yankees and Brooklyn Robins were scheduled to hit the trail southward from the snow-ridden metropolis. A half dozen Yanks, with two newspapermen for each athlete, will leave Friday for St. Petersburg, Fla., and the Robins for Clearwater, Fla., the next day.

Pittsburgh's pitchers and catchers are on their way to report at Paso Robles, California, on Wednesday, when Detroit's battery men will be leaving their homes to answer the roll at San Antonio, Texas, next Sunday. The first squad of Cubs will entrain from Chicago Thursday for the camp at Catalina, Cal. Members of the Cincinnati Reds take off Saturday for Orlando, Fla., where the first workout is scheduled for February 28.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat trouble. Creomulsion contains, in addition, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs, chronic coughs, bronchial coughs, croup, whooping cough, influenza, asthmatic coughs, and other throat troubles. Ask your druggist for Creomulsion and use as directed with the understanding that you must like the way it relieves from the very first dose or your money is to be refunded. (Adv.)

Ohio State's Basket Ball Stars

Chief hopes of Ohio State's basket ball team rest upon this pair of athletes. Bill Hunt (left), running guard, is captain of the Buckeyes, while "Bus" McMillen, a sophomore, is a forward.

Hunt, a product of Toledo Scott high, is one of the few veterans on the squad. He won three "O's" in football and is on his way to his third in basket ball. He is married.

McMillen is one of the most promising new players to grace Ohio State basket ball since Johnny Miner, one of the greatest in Big Ten history, showed himself here. He is big, weighing more than 200 pounds, but gets around the floor with the speed and grace of an athlete of much smaller poundage. His home is at Delaware, Ohio.

WRESTLING TIPS BY NOTED COACH

Not the Rough and Tumble Sport People Think.

Boys! Do you want to know how to wrestle?

Here are some of the pointers given by George Pinneo, famous coach of the American Olympic wrestling team, as printed in the American Boy Magazine.

First Mr. Pinneo explains in the American Boy that "Wrestling isn't the rough-and-tumble sport that uninformed people think it is. It demands all the traits of a good athlete: the speed and the wind of a track man, the muscles of a football lineman, an acrobat's agility and sense of balance, and a swimmer's all-round development. It builds these qualities in the boys who take it up."

You can learn the fundamental wrestling holds by practicing with your chum, writes Mr. Pinneo.

"You won't need a gymnasium.

"Make your own mat, and put it in your basement. If you want one the regulation size take four 12-foot lengths of two-by-four lumber and fit them into a square. Round off the edges and pad the strips by tacking several thicknesses of cloth over them. Then find an old piece of canvas—from a wornout tent or tarpaulin—and tack it tightly over the 12-foot frame. Two inches of sawdust under the canvas, and your mat is complete.

"The next thing to do is to call your chum and start practicing. If possible, get pointers from an experienced wrestler. Begin by walking through the simpler holds. I say 'walk through them' because only in this way can you learn what to do with your arms and legs at each stage of the game. Don't use all your muscle or speed—take it slowly and study your position.

"When you start a bout you are standing on the mat, facing your opponent. You're both thinking the same thing:

"'I must put his shoulders to the mat and hold them there.'

"But before you can do that you've got to close with him, and then to get behind him. It's important to get behind your man because it's possible to win your bout simply by staying behind him longer—at least one minute longer—than he stays behind you.

"Most wrestlers start things off by advancing to each other and taking what is called the referee's hold. Both men are bent forward, each man's head is resting against his opponent's left shoulder, his right hand grasping the other man's left arm above the elbow and his left hand on the back of the other man's neck. The feet are well apart and parallel. Learn the hold, because most go-behinds start from there. The referee's hold is a safe one for both wrestlers.

"From this point on the job is to get behind your opponent. One of the very simplest methods is by the arm-lift. Remember that in the referee's hold your right hand is grasping your opponent's left arm above the elbow. Merely by shifting your right hand under, thumb inside, and pushing his left arm up and to your left you'll find yourself behind him.

"Try it on your chum. Let him try it on you. Get it down pat, because it's the simplest go-behind known and one that even experienced wrestlers sometimes fail to guard against.

"But you ought to know a number of go-behinds, because if one doesn't work you'll want to try something else, quick. The football dive is one that collegiate wrestlers use more often than any other. Simply let go of the other man and dive for his legs, making sure to keep your shoulders high so that if you miss his legs he can't easily get around you. If he tries this block him with your outstretched arms. If you can grab his legs lift him up and tip him to the mat.

"If the football dive doesn't work try the pull-down. Clasp the opponent behind the neck with both hands, jerk him forward and throw him off balance. If he goes all the way to the mat you can slip behind him; if he goes only to his knees you can hold him there until you find an opening to go behind.

"There's one more go-behind you'll want to use—the trip, or grapevine. It's so old that most wrestlers have forgotten it, or haven't troubled to practice it. Take another good rest and then try it. Step forward with your left leg. At the same time put your left arm around his right. When you end up he'll be on the mat with you on top. In this hold, though, the quickest man wins. If you don't succeed in carrying him back, more than likely he'll carry you back. So don't try it in half-hearted fashion. Go through with it! And the same advice applies to all the other go-behinds.

"Now that you are on the mat behind your opponent—remember that 'behind' means at his side, and only slightly to his rear—the next job is to work him into a hold that will pin his shoulders to the mat. For the following explanations assume that you are on the right. Both of you are on hands and knees. Your left arm is around his waist—not far over—and your right hand is grasping his right upper arm. The upper arm is that part from the elbow to the shoulder. If he tries to get up pull his right arm in to his chest and jerk his body to the right with your left arm.

"First off, you'll probably want to try the half nelson. Watch your chance and slip your right hand under his right arm and get your hand on his neck. That's the half nelson, but it's not effective until it's furthered—that is, until you've shoved your arm farther along. To do this you will have to lift his right arm higher. Do not try to shove his head down, because the neck muscles are the strongest muscles of the body. Get his arm up. Then, when you've furthered your half nelson turn your opponent over on his back.

"There are a number of other holds, but if you learn those I have explained you will have enough to keep you busy in the basement during the winter months," Mr. Pinneo concludes in the American Boy.

"As you work you'll find your muscles developing, not only in size but in responsiveness and endurance. You'll lose your natural fear of physical contact. You'll be gaining confidence. You'll find yourself moving with nice balance and catlike speed.

"You'll be acquiring a steel-like grip. Best of all, no single part of your body will be developed to the exclusion of other parts. Wrestling gives you the right kind of healthy, all-round growth that you want. And it gives a weapon no man can take from you—a lithe body schooled in the art of self-defense."

Junior Sunday School League

Saturday afternoon two games were played by the boys of the Junior Sunday School League on the "Y" court. The first game of the day was the outstanding contest as Clinton Avenue defeated the Comforter quintet 18 to 17. The game was a fast one from the start to the finish. Quick did the high scoring for the victors while Kieffer kept the Comforters in hot pursuit by caging 14 markers.

The Congregational-Presbyterian contest was not as fast as the first contest staged but was marked for the good work of the long center, Hank Krom. He made good with 16 tosses from the court and the other members made but four of the remaining markers by which the Congregationals won out. Post did the best work for the vanquished five. The score at the end of the event was 36 to 15.

Illustrating the agony of rheumatic pains

HAD SUFFERED FOR YEARS WITH RHEUMATISM

Tried many remedies—Simple home treatment brought relief

A sufferer from acute rheumatism for many years, a Winchester, N. H., man at last found that he could always get rid of the pain, and relieve the swelling and stiffness by a simple home treatment.

"After trying various remedies," he writes, "Sloan's Liniment was recommended to me, and it stopped the pain."

What is the reason for these remarkable results?

Simply that Sloan's doesn't just deaden the nerves. It stirs up your own forces to get rid of the conditions that are causing the pain.

Apply lightly without rubbing, and at once you'll feel the comforting warmth as fresh, healing blood begins circulating through the affected spot. The stiff, swollen tissues relax, the inflammation goes down, the pain stops, and soon you feel normal again. Get a bottle today and have it on hand. All druggists—35 cents.

Legislature Enters 7th Week

Albany Considers Present Session Dull, Although More Than Usual Number of Bills Have Been Passed —Some Matters Now Pending.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 21 (AP).—As the New York Legislature enters upon its seventh week the comment most frequently heard in the halls of the Capitol is that "it's a dull session—the quietest in years."

Both houses have passed a greater number of bills than usual at this period, but most of these have been of such a nature as not to raise any issue or bring on debate

In fact, there have been only two debates which have attracted any appreciable interest. One developed on the Cuvillier and Phelps resolutions designed, respectively, to memorialize Congress to forbid the poisoning of alcohol and to notify the national legislature of the favorable action taken by the New York voters last November on the modification referendum. The other was on the proposed constitutional amendment for a four-year term for governor, with state and presidential elections held simultaneously.

Dry Defeat Inevitable.

After adoption in the Assembly by large majorities the Cuvillier and Phelps resolutions were sent to the Senate for concurrence Since then they have been in the hands of the judiciary committee. It is understood that Senator Fearon, chairman of the committee, will attempt to have them reported with a recommendation for favorable action; but should he fail in this, the supporters of the resolutions will vote to have the committee discharged from further consideration. In any event, there is a sufficient number of senators in favor of the resolutions to bring about their adoption It is even likely that the opponents will not press their opposition, resigning themselves to an inevitable dry defeat.

Waterpower Issue Unsettled.

The outstanding issue of the session—state development of waterpower—remains to be settled, but it is thought probable that by the time it reaches the floors of the two houses a compromise will have been reached between the Republicans and the Democrats. The Democratic majority is backing up Governor Smith's recommendation that a power authority, similar to the New York city port authority, be established and directed, first, to investigate the feasibility of state development of waterpower, and then, in event of a favorable report, to proceed with the development with authority to issue bonds.

Republican leaders have entered upon a series of conferences with the governor looking toward a compromise. They have suggested that a commission be established to investigate the waterpower problem, intimating that should a favorable report on state development be returned they would then agree to creation of such a body as proposed by Governor Smith.

In view of the fact that the Republicans have a predominant majority in the Legislature, it is considered likely that the governor will finally submit as a matter of necessity to the compromise proposed by them. Should he refuse to compromise, his own proposal would be doomed to defeat.

"Clean Books" Bill Hearing.

The only important hearing announced for this week will be held before the Senate and Assembly codes committees on the Gedney "clean books" bill Several other hearings are scheduled, but all of them on comparatively minor measures

The Senate probably will confirm this week, possibly tomorrow night, Governor Smith's nomination of Dr. Raymond F. C. Kieb, superintendent of the Matteawan State Hospital, as commissioner of correction, succeeding James L. Long, who has tendered his resignation. Other appointments of lesser interest are also likely to receive approval this week.

Booming Big City

"Let's Know Detroit" courses are offered in the academic high schools of Detroit by the vocational education department. They are industrial mechanics courses designed to meet the demand for industrial information by persons in professional and commercial pursuits. The principal industries of the city are represented in the four courses, which embrace metal industries, automobile industries, building industries, electrical construction and wood-working industries. The courses are arranged to cover four semesters. Instruction is given in general shops with a great variety of equipment, supplemented by specialized shops. Suitable books, group excursions, student reports, class discussions, talks by specialists and shop practice are all utilized in teaching.

Grass Woven Into Cloth

The secret of turning tropical grasses and other fibrous substances into clothes to wear is believed to have been solved by Dr. [illegible] of Birmingham university, relates Science Service. Chemical processes are said to have been perfected for separating the fibers from the raw materials and preparing them for spinning. The fabrics, if commercially successful, may take the place of cotton in the regions where large supplies of grasses are available. It is thought that new and interesting materials may be developed for wearing apparel and for other uses.

Beards of Indians

J. P. Harrington, in a statement prepared for the Pathfinder Magazine, explains why the American Indians always appeared to be clean shaven. "The beard of the American aborigines," says Harrington, who is an ethnologist on the staff of the bureau of American ethnology, "was sparse, like that of the peoples in the adjacent parts of Asia, and the straggling beard hairs on the faces of the men were habitually pulled. While sitting around the Indian was continually running his hands over his cheeks and chin, feeling for hairs. These were pulled out by the roots, a good hold being gotten on the hair between the fingers. It hurt, and sometimes made the Indian wince. Occasionally a piece of mussel shell, a thin chip of flint, or the like, was held in the hand in order to better grasp the hair. Some Indian women also had hair grow on their faces and extracted it little by little the same as the men. Of course, some Indians were tidier than others in keeping the hair from their faces."

Vanity and Exercise Mix as Death Potion

Paris.—Vanity and fondness for indoor physical exercise spelled death for Raoul La Chapelle, government employee in Paris, France, police have decided after dropping suicide and murder theories in his unusual death.

After Chapelle disappeared mysteriously police broke into his apartment to search for him. They found his dead body, dressed in a clown suit, suspended by the neck from gymnastic apparatus attached to the ceiling.

Piecing together evidence, detectives found that the man had dressed for a masquerade party. He had apparently stepped on a stool to get a full view of himself in a mirror. While on the stool he began exercising, police say, and the stool slipped. His neck caught in the ropes, and he was choked to death.

Girl Driver Learns That it is Simple to Put on Chains

Courtesy, National Safety Council

It is not at all difficult to put on chains over your tires—when you know how. To demonstrate how comparatively easy it is to put on these accident-prevention devices, the National Safety Council recently staged an exhibition in Chicago, as illustrated above. Here are the instructions: First drape the chains over the tire so that the hooks just about touch the ground at the rear. Then the car is rolled forward until connecting hooks are about a foot above the road. The inside hook is connected first and then the outer hook, as tightly as possible by hand. As soon as the car starts rolling, the chains loosen up a bit, the motion allowing them to creep on the tire.

Working together

Through the collective efforts of men, most of the constructive work of this age is done.

The collective effort of the New York Central Lines is represented by some 140,000 investors and 170,000 employees.

And many of those who work for the New York Central are also investors in it, for more than 40 percent of the 64,000 New York Central stockholders are New York Central employees.

Whether as an investor or an employee, or both, identification with the New York Central is evidence of that cooperative spirit upon which rests the greater usefulness of modern industrial enterprise.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—With many traders away for an extended week end holiday, speculation for the advance slowed up considerably today, meeting increased resistance through heavier profit taking and bear selling. Offerings generally were fairly well absorbed, considering the fact that the market has completed four weeks of rising prices. Renewal of the call money rate at 4 per cent, calmed fears of a temporary credit stringency.

Baldwin approached within a few points of the 200 mark predicted for the stock when the current advance started a few weeks ago. Union Carbide, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Skelly Oil and Murray Body were among the score of issues to sell at their best prices since 1925 or longer. Canadian Pacific crossed 190 to the highest price in over a decade.

Oils showed signs of better support, with some of the buying presumably influenced by expectations of an agreemnet to curtail production in the new Seminole field. Motors failed to make much progress, but some of the accessory shares recorded good gains particularly Briggs Body and Electric Auto Light. Public utilities moved upward under the leadership of Consolidated Gas and Montana Power.

With few exceptions rails were quiet during the first half of the session but they gathered strength in the early afternoon when a buying movement developed for the shares of the so-called "hill roads"

Government Wins In Pottery Cases

"Rule of Reason" Invoked by Government in Appeal From Decision of Circuit Court Which Reversed Convictions of Trial Court.

Washington, Feb. 21 (AP).—The government won in the supreme court today in its prosecution of the Trenton and 22 other pottery companies under the Sherman anti-trust law.

The "rule of reason" as applied by the supreme court in the Standard Oil and Tobacco cases was again argued before that tribunal by the government in appealing the Trenton Potteries case.

The Trenton and other pottery companies, representing more than eighty per cent of the entire trade in sanitary pottery ware and fixtures, was prosecuted on the charge of having agreed upon fixed uniform prices. In the federal district court in New York city twenty individuals and twenty-three corporations were convicted, and jail sentences were imposed in most instances. The circuit court of appeals reversed the decision, and the government took the case to the supreme court.

The government contended that the controversy presented issues of vital importance in the enforcement of the anti-trust laws, while the potteries companies urged the court to dismiss the appeal as presenting unsubstantial questions, needing no further argument.

The government emphasized the application of the "rule of reason" by the circuit court as the outstanding question, asserting that it was principally upon that ground that the trial court had been reversed. It asserted that the circuit court had committed error when it held that the trial judge should have charged the jury that under the Sherman act only "unreasonable" prices were prohibited. It insisted that any fixing of prices by a combination of competitors constituted unreasonable restraint of trade and was illegal. The well-known "rule of reason" laid down by the Supreme court in the Standard Oil and Tobacco cases was never intended to be construed, it argued, as meaning that eighty per cent of the producers in a given industry could of their own motion and by agreement fix prices, and then defend their action on the ground that the prices fixed were reasonable.

The potteries companies minimized the "ruler of reason" grounds for the appeal. They declared the ruling of the circuit court was based principally on questions relating to the admission of evidence and that the circuit court was so plainly right that there was no substantial question for the Supreme Court to pass upon.

Plant Societies

The science of botany has been greatly advanced by the development of what may be called the sociology of plants—that is, the study of their relations to one another as well as their adjustments to surroundings. Botanists recognize that plants are not scattered haphazard over the globe, but are organized into definite communities. A pond has its plant society, all the members of which fall into their proper places. A swamp forest consists of trees possessing a certain social relationship and differing from those that form a forest on dry land. There is progression from one social organization of plants to another. A lily pond may give place to a swamp meadow, this to a society of swamp shrubs, and this again to a swamp forest of tamarack, pine and hemlock. So societies of plants on dry land succeed one another as the conditions change.

Large Audience Attends Benefit

Despite the inclement weather a large audience filled Reade's Kingston Theatre Sunday evening to witness the benefit performance for the Jewish Community Center. The show was a success due to the cooperation of the performers and the management of the theatre. The principal attraction was the motion picture, "The Cat's Pajamas".

There was but one adverse feature in the cancelling of the act which was to have been put on by Vincent Van Bramer with some of his pupils and that of Al and Harry Jones.

Both acts were scheduled as big hits and the audience was awaiting the presentation. Mr. Van Bramer announced from the stage, and at the same time introduced the performers who were to have taken part in the act, that due to word received from city officials his act would not be permitted to be staged on Sunday. He also asked the audience to bear the disappointment with him as it was his sole purpose to put on a wholesome act for their entertainment.

DeKoskie and Levine accompanied by Mrs. Lehr put on a pleasing act and received several encores.

Miss Helen Stern-Moss, assisted by Miss Ruby Mortman at the piano, sang several delightful selections for the audience who registered their appreciation with much applause.

Harry Dodge and Jacob Moll rendered classic numbers on the piano and violin respectively and were also given hearty applause.

Metro Housman Arrested.

Metro Housman of this city was arrested Sunday afternoon for mishandling at the ferry shed on the Strand. This morning Judge Sh[illegible]feldt imposed a sentence of ten days in the county jail, and suspended the serving pending good behavior.

Po's Marathon

It's the running expenses that keep father out of breath.—Wall Street Journal.

Card for St. Mary's Smoker

The card for St. Mary's smoker has been completed and the main bout will be fought by Joe Voedick of Saugerties and Jim Hubbell of Newark, N. J. The affair will no doubt be one of the fastest put on at any smoker in this vicinity for both boys have reputations of high regard in their respective abodes.

The semi-finals needs no explanation. It will be between Bill Roedell, "The Fighting Cop", and Charlie Fisher, one of the busiest fighters in the city. Much is expected of this bout because both boys are fast steppers and pack a healthy wallop.

The other numbers will be fought by Kid Buckman of this city and Young Diehl; "Coke" Costello, Port Ewen, vs. Frank Murphy, West New York; Roy Van Buren and Kid McFarland, West New York; Billy Litts, Highland, vs. Charley Moore, Jersey City.

THE W. T. GRANT COMPANY REORGANIZATION PLANS.

The W. T. Grant Company, operating a chain of over one hundred 25c, 50c and $1 department stores, have announced a plan for the reorganization of the company, which provides for the redemption on April 1 of the 8 per cent preferred stock of the company at $110 per share. A new company called the W. T. Grant Company has been organized in Delaware with a capitalization of 550,000 no par value shares which will acquire all or the greater part of the stock of the W. T. Grant Company of Massachusetts.

It is proposed that 450,000 shares of stock in the new company will be issued to acquire all of the common stock of the Massachusetts company, all of which is held by those active in the management of the company.

The holders of the preferred stock of record of February 15, 1927, have been offered the opportunity to exchange their preferred stock for the common stock in the new company, on the basis of two and one-half shares of new common stock for each share of preferred stock. Such common shares as have been set aside to retire the preferred stock and are not exchanged by the preferred stockholders may later be offered to the public.

This offer to the preferred stockholders is the first opportunity for persons outside the management of the company to purchase common stock of the company.

It is anticipated that a dividend rate of $1 per share per annum will be inaugurated on the new shares beginning July 1, 1927.

The officers of the new company will be W. T. Grant, chairman of the board; C. E. Freeman, president; F. A. Powdrell, vice president and treasurer; B. A. Rowe, vice president and secretary; E. L. Dow, vice president, and L. H. Crawford, vice president. The board of directors includes these officers and in addition, J. E. Bliss, H. S. Davis, S. A. Kaufman and Max Radt.

R. B. Battles, the manager of the W. T. Grant Company store in this city, advises that in the year ended January 31, 1927, sales for the entire company were over $36,000,000 and profits were the largest in the history of the company.

W. C. T. U. Celebrates.

The birthday of Frances Willard, founder of the W. C. T. U., was celebrated by appropriate services in the St. James M. E. Church last Thursday afternoon. The services were in charge of Mrs. Anna Ennist. Miss Alice Kiersted made the opening prayer, followed by duets by Mr. and Mrs. Orlando A. Wood, evangelistic singers of Kingston, who beautifully rendered several of the negro spirituelles, with guitar accompaniment, which was greatly enjoyed by all. After a short business meeting a social hour and refreshments were enjoyed by all.

Cottage Prayer Meeting.

There will be a prayer meeting at the home of Mrs. Reis, 100 South Manor avenue, on Tuesday evening, at 7:30. The Rev. Mr. Field will be the leader. The Mandolin Club of the Y. W. C. A. will furnish music. Everybody welcome.

REAL "CLASSICS" IN PROSE AND POETRY

Qualities That Render Them Immortal.

In literature the word classic was originally limited to Greek and Latin prose and poetry. It has now come to mean any piece of literature whose quality is such that it has survived for fifty or a hundred years and is by common consent regarded as so good as to be permanent. A literary classic should possess one or all of the following qualities:

1. It should reflect the mode of thought and the customs and manners of its time.

The travels of Herodotus, the dialogues of Socrates, and the novels of Jane Austen are examples.

2. It should be written in a beautiful and striking style.

Lincoln's Gettysburg speech is an example.

3. It should spring from and appeal to a cultivated imagination.

The poems of Keats are an example.

4. It should be a contribution to the thought of the world and should stimulate the thought of the world.

The essays of Ralph Waldo Emerson are an example.

5. It should possess a universal human interest and express all phases of human experience.

The Old Testament and Shakespeare's plays are examples.

No one generation can determine what classics it is producing. The final judgment must and will be pronounced by succeeding generations. Walt Whitman and Lincoln were looked on with contempt by many of their most highly educated contemporaries. And yet Whitman's "O Captain! My Captain!" and Lincoln's Gettysburg speech will live as long as the English language lives.

Nor does a classic have to be "highbrow stuff." If it is a genuine intelligent and witty picture of a certain aspect of society, even a "best-seller" may become a classic; although I am bound to say that most of our modern best-sellers have very little chance of achieving this immortality. The "Pickwick Papers," the "Biglow Papers," and "Night With Uncle Remus" were all best-sellers and are all classics. I hope I shall shock nobody by saying that I think "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" is more likely to become a classic than many contemporary novels or stories that are much more pretentious. Artificial and pretentious writing never makes a classic. Sincerity, simplicity and spontaneity are qualities that every true classic—whether in music, painting, prose or poetry—possesses; all others pretending to the titles are counterfeits. Let nobody hoodwink you into supposing that the classics are pompous, stilted, and boresome. If they were, nobody would read them—not even your teachers and professors.—Lawrence F. Abbot, in the Outlook.

New Business Idea

A retail drug store at Seattle, Wash., bought up the street car capacity of the city for the hour between 9 a. m. and 10 a. m. During this period any one might ride to town free. The result was that twice as many people as usual entered the retail district that forenoon. The store playing the host regarded the deal as good business. Soon there were enough applications for the same innovation to sell the car service each day for a month.

Heavy Snowfall in Upstate New York

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 21 (AP)—The snow storm which accompanied the cold wave of the past two days was general throughout upstate New York.

In the vicinity of Malone, a northeast blizzard raged yesterday, and every road leading out of the village was blocked. The mercury hovered about the zero mark.

Oswego, on the shores of Lake Ontario, experienced a fall of about nine inches.

Binghamton endeavored to dig itself out of a 13-inch snowfall that in the country districts piled into huge drifts. Corning was buried under a white mantle a foot in depth, and eight inches fell at Olean.

The fall in Albany was lighter than in the more northern points, but ground which had been bared by last week's thaw was again hidden from sight.

LAST NIGHT on the RADIO

Wonderful indeed were the manifestations of radio Saturday and Sunday nights. Every kind of radio demon was loosed in the air and a tendency of most stations to spread added to the confusion. It was not hard to pick up stations—the difficulty was they could be picked up only in lots of a half dozen Queer things resulted, as for instance, when WLWL and WGY alternated in being heard while there was preaching at both places, the result being an incoherent dialogue with an accompaniment of jazz from Miami Beach Finally WGY gained the ascendency and the volume was tremendous from that station.

There was great variety without changing dial position It was easy to pick up four stations and a cat fight by bloopers and then, to clinch the fact that radio has neither limit nor rules, at a time when nearly everything was blanketed, PWX came romping in, clear, loud and altogether perfect After several vocal solos, including "La Donne e Mobile", there was interminable dance music from a cabaret in Havana And all this time Philadelphia, Washington, Atlanta could not be tuned in and New York was very faint

Aimee McPherson is as popular as WGY with the bloopers Aimee opened her performance Saturday afternoon by asking the congregation to give cheers for the band and the reporters. WODA was clear in the afternoon but very weak and muddy after dark.

Now that the WJZ engineers have admitted that much of the distortion at that station is caused by something wrong with the works at the station, fans will be relieved of the fear that their sets are out of order.

One reason why nobody tunes in Tuinucu any more is that the cuckoo station has changed its wave length from about 340 to 275 meters.

Radio is gradually dethroning jazz and bringing about a return to the songs of heart and home, the ballads and story songs, according to Allen McQuhae, the popular Irish tenor of the Atwater Kent radio concerts. In support of his estimate of the king of songs the public is demanding Mr. McQuhae stated that in the thousands of letters he received during his twenty-one Atwater Kent concerts last summer, songs most frequently requested in the order of their popularity, were Mother Machree, Absent, I Hear You Calling Me, Kathleen Mavourneen, Danny Boy, Where the River Shannon Flows, At Dawning, I'll Take You Home Again Kathleen, Love's Old Sweet Song, and My Wild Irish Rose.

Hulda Lashanska, lyric soprano who has sung in all the leading American cities, will broadcast the Atwater Kent Sunday night radio concert, from WEAF, February 27, assisted by Gerald Warburg, noted cellist. Nineteen stations will join in the broadcast.

Receivers which come direct from their parent plants, ready for immediate installation and use, are becoming a prominent factor in the 1927 offerings of local merchants. These receivers operate directly from light-socket current. They require no batteries, eliminators or charger. Electrical equipment is provided as a built-in part, as fully guaranteed by the manufacturer as the rest of the receiver. In such sets as the Spartan 110-AC, this equipment is so condensed and simplified as to occupy no more space than that needed by two conventional dry B-batteries. While such receivers cost more than battery operated sets, their owners avoid the expense of any additional equipment, as well as the responsibility of its installation, replacement and care.

The first encyclopedia of radio information ever published in America makes its appearance among the early publications of the new year, in S. Gernsback's Radio Encyclopedia. From the nature of its material, this volume amounts to practically a compact review of all that has been done in radio up to this time. It presents a complete classification of the latest authoritative data on scientific discovery and experimentation in radio, and every direction of its application. The compiler has aimed to provide not merely a dictionary of radio terms, but an actual ready-reference encyclopedia and practical handbook for the most general all-around use. Its references cover every item of importance relating to radio or the radio industry. The text comprises 1,930 definitions of words, terms, and symbols which have a specific application in radio, concisely explained, and further elucidated with over 500 illustrations, diagrams and drawings. All the most modern instruments, every known circuit, and every part and apparatus used in radio are fully described by word and picture. Detailed treatment is given also to such subjects as aerials, amplifiers, batteries, detectors, oscillation, radiation, switches, transformers, units, vacuum tubes, waves, etc. In addition, a supplementary cross-index brings together correlated subjects and material in appropriate groupings. Added interest and educational value is given through brief biographies of the outstanding personalities in electrical and radio science. Mr. Gernsback furnishes nearly 70 such short histories of discoverers and pathfinders, inventors and technicians whose work has brought radio to its present advanced development. The book may be recommended for international use to every radio listener, and should also be of great service to the radio engineer as a handy reference book. It can also be used profitably as a text book or reading guide by radio and electrical students, experimenters, wireless operators, radio salesmen—in short, by anyone engaged in work or study connected in any way with radio. Its definitions are in simple, everyday language, understandable to anyone who reads English. At the same time, they also meet the needs of those who require exact technical information. The book is published by the compiler, Sidney Gernsback, at 53 Park Place, New York city. Mr. Gernsback, who is the editor of Radio Listeners' Guide and Call Book (Radio Review), has previously published a number of other volumes of popular scientific information.

Great Hookup for Coolidge Address

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—Forty-two stations, comprising the largest radio chain ever formed, will be used tomorrow by the National Broadcasting Company to transit President Coolidge's address on George Washington before a joint gathering of the House and Senate.

Stations in principal cities from Portland, Maine, to Portland, Oregon, and from Detroit to Atlanta will be included in the hookup, which is expected to allow reception by radio fans in every part of the country. Four short wave transmitters will be used by KDKA at Pittsburgh and WGY at Schenectady in an effort to reach Europe. Broadcasting will begin at 12 30 p. m., eastern standard time.

Successful Book Thief

Fortunately for our literary treasures, dishonesty among librarians is extremely rare, but the arrest of the curator of a Paris library for trying to sell a valuable Thirteenth-century MS. in his charge to a London book seller recalls the depredations of the most successful book thief on record—Count Guglielmo Libri, for many years inspector general of public libraries in France. In the course of his visits of inspection Libri contrived to remove from the various collections a remarkable number of valuable books and manuscripts, and before discovery managed to accumulate some $200,000 by the sale of his plunder. In 1848 a warrant was issued for his arrest, but he had friends at court and was enabled to escape to England, where he lived very comfortably for many years on the proceeds of his stolen treasures.

Providing Beauty

It is delightful to have something done without regard to the returns to the doer, to have something spontaneous, ample, gloriously useless; thousands spent for the mere pleasure of spending it on others; to have the savings of years bottled in a flask, and then pour it forth on feet and head . . . and then break the flask. To some it seems like a criminal waste to put all the skill and labor of a lifetime on a few feet of canvas, while the painter can scarcely get bread, and then give that canvas to the world But it will impart pleasure to thousands. . . . Pour out your money on the beautiful. Encourage the workers in the beautiful. . . . You who are rich ought to provide the beautiful for yourselves and for the poor.—Charles F. Deems, in "Religion in Beauty."

One of the Collection

Edsel Ford, who is a great collector of automobile anecdotes, said the other day:

"A man once went to the Blank headquarters to try a Blank car. A stock car was brought round and a demonstrator drove the man 20 miles out into the country. Then the car stopped. The demonstrator got down to see what the trouble was.

"'My goodness me!' he said.

"'What is it?' was the demand. 'What ails her?'

"'They forget to put a drop of gasoline in the tank,' said the demonstrator. 'The car has done them 20 miles on its reputation alone.'"

Effect of Education

Criminals are said to be better educated than formerly. Then, every day, in every way, the world gets better and better.—New York Evening Post.

POULTRY

CHICKENS DON'T WATCH A CLOCK

Chickens do not watch the clock. The "best workers" in the flock start scratching as soon as it is light in the morning and continue until it is dark.

Many poultrymen are taking advantage of this natural tendency for activity by using artificial light to lengthen the working day of the farm flock during the winter months. The result is a larger production of eggs, provided the extra light is furnished for good hens which are properly fed and cared for.

"The biggest advantage of this system," says J. G. Halpin, poultry specialist at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture, "is that it stimulates the mature hens to lay, and hastens the development of late and immature pullets so they lay more eggs during the winter months." However, he believes that proper feed and good care will be of greater value to well-developed pullets than will the extra hours of light.

"Forcing the mature hens into early winter laying may result in reduced hatchability of the eggs during the hatching season. This is due more to the difficulty of supplying the flock with a complete ration that supplies all of their requirements in proper proportions, than to the mere fact that the hens are laying," he explains.

"One of the most difficult things to supply under our conditions is sufficient vitamine D to make it possible for the hens to lay during the winter without robbing their bodies. If these materials could be supplied in sufficient quantities, the hatchability of the eggs would not be seriously lowered."

The poultrymen who have used electric lights usually turn them on between four and five o'clock in the morning, although some use the light in the evening, at which time they give a heavy feed. An alarm clock may be used to throw on the switch automatically. If the chickens are to be aroused at these hours, the light should be distributed so as to cover the floor and shine on all of the roosts.

Feed Flocks Effectively to Get Greatest Profit

The greatest profits from the sale of eggs at any one season of the year may be obtained during the winter months. Eggs are high in price at this season of the year because few poultrymen are obtaining eggs. Eggs are low in price during the "flush season" in the spring, because they are plentiful. The cost of feeding varies slightly from winter to spring. That is, during the winter you have a greater difference between the cost of producing eggs and the price obtained from the eggs. As the price of eggs drops in the spring and the cost of feed remains practically the same we have less opportunity for making a profit. Since the cost of feed represents more than 60 per cent of the cost of producing eggs on the farm we must aim to feed our flocks as effectively as possible.

Poultry Notes

Sunlight is a better egg producer than red pepper.

A pullet, properly handled and fed, should gain in weight even though laying regularly.

• • •

If you have neglected to get a new cockerel, then order a setting or two of high grade eggs now, and raise your own cockerels for new blood next year.

• • •

A cheap treatment for mites, and a fairly good one, is to paint the hen house inside, walls, roosts and all, with a mixture of old crank-case oil and kerosene.

• • •

The market seems to be wanting bigger broilers lately—birds weighing between two and three pounds. Evidently, city folks are demanding meatier bones to pick.

• • •

Keep plenty of green feed for the pullets; it is essential for both health and egg production.

• • •

A broody hen, if taken the first day she is broody, will come back to production in three days if she is put in a cool, slatted coop and fed liberally with mash and milk.

• • •

Outbreaks of coccidiosis (bloody diarrhea) which is fatal to a great many chickens every spring, may be largely eliminated by plowing up the ground in the chick yard.

• • •

Pullets lay best when confined to the poultry house during the winter months and fed a laying mash.

• • •

In feeding poultry the heavy grain feed should come at the evening meal. The birds should have all the grain they will clean up at this time.

Duck eggs hatch in twenty-eight days. When the hatching is done by hens it is well to keep the hen covered until she may be introduced to her children, otherwise she may peck them to death.

Foresaw the Telephone

The possibility of telephone or wireless telegraph was evidently in the mind of Galileo, for in 1632 he referred to "the secret art" by which through the sympathy of magnetic needles men might converse at long distances.

The growing popularity of the Double Ring Ceremony is unquestioned. It's not a new fashion. It's simply the reappearance of a very old one—changed for the better, as you would expect. ONE MAN SHAKEN UP AS CARS CRASH ON SUNDAY

Sunday evening while Harold D. Ryzer of Stamford was driving his Ford coupe down Hasbrouck avenue he collided with the Chevrolet car of John J. McCardle of 24 Chapel street, which was parked near No. 199 Hasbrouck avenue and which Ryzer claimed had no tail light lit. Both cars were damaged and Ralph Burton of 491 Delaware avenue, who was riding with Ryzer, was shaken up by the crash but was not badly hurt.
